THIS book is planned to give as much grammar as is serviceable in the school study of Latin. If Latin grammar is to be understood and relished by boys, it must be confined to the most necessary facts, and these must be presented in a clear and pleasing way. Ut intelligamur instandum est, "insist on being understood," was the maxim of a very great teacher, and should be the supreme rule in presenting the elements of any subject. Living directness of statement, even at the risk of missing the finer shadings, is better than inanimate precision. A sketch in outline contains less, but tells the beginner far more than an elaborated picture does.

Scientific Latin grammar is not for boys, but for men. The best that can be done for a boy is to acquaint him surely with the facts of first value for him—the facts he can use in reading his school authors. This is enough; for the authors he is to read represent the best period of Latin and serve to introduce him to the literature generally. The object is not to make grammarians or Latinists, but to educate the boy—to train his taste and judgment in the field of language and literature by means of one of the most powerful instruments that can be used.

Latin grammar has been making and unmaking for two thousand years. Great grammarians have searched every nook and corner of the subject. Most of the best (and worst) things have been said. Accordingly, while an elementary grammar offers opportunities for improved restatement, it affords little chance to write with originality without writing fiction. In issuing this book I wish to acknowledge unreservedly the abundant help received from leading writers, American, English, and German, and especially from those who have done so much in our own land to clarify the school grammars. The penetrating researches of Hale, the pure brightness of Lane's renderings, the lucid order of Gildersleeve, the exactness of Lodge, the mastery of summary statement in Bennett, the steady good sense in Harkness, and the critical carefulness of Allen and Greenough's grammar—all these, I hope, have in some degree influenced this little manual, which is under many obligations to them. The Schmalz-Wagener and Ellendt-Seyffert grammars, as well as other German school editions, have likewise been constantly useful in suggestion. The fundamental studies of the masters in scientific grammar, upon which all our school grammars rest, have also been consulted at need again and again. I must mention in addition the very valuable help given by my colleagues, Professor Westcott and Dr. Charles Alexander Robinson, in solving many difficulties and in reading the proofs. Acknowledgment of friendly aid is also due to my fellow-editors in this series.

Puerulus minabit eos is an old word of prophecy, whereunto writers of school-books will "do well that they take heed, as unto a light shining in a dark place." Thus warned, I have tried to keep in ever-present view the needs of the boys and girls for whom this book has been made. If it shall lead them, without too many scratches, through what Alcuin long ago so picturesquely styled "the thorny thickets of grammatical density," it will have been well worth the writing.

VIII INTERJECTIONS, 262.

B. THE FORMATION OF WORDS, 263: Derivatives, 264-273; Compounds, 274-276.

THIRD PART: SENTENCES . . . 277-663

I THE SENTENCE IN GENERAL: Definitions, 277, 278; Ways of Stating, 279; Direct Questions, 280-283; Kinds of Sentences, 284-287; How Words are Combined, 288; Rules for Combining, 289-304.

II USES OF NOUNS: The Cases, 305; Nominative, 306; Vocative, 307; Accusative, 308-325; Dative, 326-345; Genitive, 346-371; Ablative, 372-407.

III USES OF ADJECTIVES: 408-418.

IV USES OF PRONOUNS: 419-439.

V USES OF VERBS: 440-655.

THE FINITE VERB: 440-620

(I) VOICE, PERSON, NUMBER, 442.

(II) TENSES, 443, 444; of Indicative, 445-460; of Subjunctive: in Leading Clauses, 461; in Subordinate Clauses (Sequence of Tenses), 462-472; of Imperative, 473-475.

(III) MOODS : 476.

A. In Principal Clauses, 477-496.

Indicative, 477-479.

Subjunctive, 480 ; Volitive, 481-483 ; Optative, 484 ; Conditional, 485-490 ; with Negatives, 491, 492 ; in Questions, 493 ; with Indefinite Second Person, 494.

Imperative, 495, 496.

B. In Subordinate Clauses, 497-620.

I Uses of Subordinate Clauses, 498-501.

1. As Nouns (Substantive Clauses), 498, 499.

2. As Adjectives (Attributive Clauses), 500.

3. As Adverbs (Adverbial Clauses), 501.

II Forms of Subordinate Clauses, 502-620.

1. Introduced by a Conjunction (Conjunctive Clauses), 503-579 ; Transition to Conjunctive Clauses, 504, 505 ; Clauses of Purpose, 506-518 ; Clauses of Result, 519-528 ; Clauses of Time, 529-540 ; Clauses of Cause, 541-549 ;
Clauses of Condition, 550-565 ; THE CONDI-TIONAL SENTENCE, 551-562 ; Clauses of Comparison, 566-568 ; Clauses of Concession, 569-572 ; Negative Clauses with quīn, 573-579.2. Introduced by a Relative (Relative Clauses), 580-589.3. Introduced by an Interrogative (Indirect Questions), 590-595.

(SYNOPSIS OF MOODS, 596)

4. Governed by Verbs of Saying or Thinking (IN-DIRECT DISCOURSE): 597-619.

Subjunctive by Attraction, 620.

VERBAL NOUNS AND ADJECTIVES : 621-655

Infinitive, 622-636 ; Gerund and Gerundive, 637-644 ;

Participle, 645-652 ; Supine, 653-655.

LATIN GRAMMAR

INTRODUCTORY

LANGUAGE

- 1 If we are to be able to tell what we think about anything, we must know how to use some kind of Language. Every language is made up of Signs. A sign is that by which anything is made known. Thus, a red light on a railway is a sign of danger, and a white light is a sign of safety. The sound of the sunset gun at a fort is a sign to lower the flag. Other well-known signs or signals are the bugle-calls in an army, and the waving of flags or flashing of lights by ships passing at sea.
- 2 Then there are signs that come nearer to what we commonly mean when we speak of language ; that is, language in the sense of speech. Such are the movements of fingers made by the deaf and dumb, the clicks of the key in a telegraph-office, the picture-writing of American Indians, and the figures of a sum in arithmetic. For in these last cases each sign usually means either some letter of the alphabet, as in the movements of fingers and the clicks of the telegraph, or some word, as in the Indian picture-writing and the figures of a sum in arithmetic.
- 3 But for all men who are able to talk, the one common and most useful kind of language is Speech, the language of words spoken and written. Spoken words last only while being spoken or remembered. Written words last longer, and may last for ages, if copies are correctly made and kept for reading. By this means we may learn what men said and thought thousands of years ago.

- 4 The two ways of learning a language are by speaking and reading. Our own language, or mother-tongue, is first learned by speaking and afterward by reading. Other languages now spoken in the world are also best learned by speaking, followed by reading. Ancient languages, now no longer spoken, or but little spoken, are most usefully learned by reading. For there is no great need of learning to speak them in order to talk with others, and they are best worth learning in order to read, and so to understand, what has been preserved to us in the ancient writings, or books.

GRAMMAR

- 5 Grammar is the study which explains speech or language. Speech is made up of words. Spoken words are made up of sounds and written words of letters, which are nothing else than written sounds. Then words may be combined with other words to make sentences. There are thus three divisions in which we may study the words which make up a language:

1. The Sounds or letters of which words are made (Sounds);
2. The separate Words themselves (Etymology);
3. The combinations of words, or Sentences (Syntax).

These are the three Parts of Grammar.

- 6 Words are of different kinds, according to their use and meaning. There are, first of all, the words which are used to name things or persons. They are called Nouns. Such are eagle, man, John, city, thirst, truth. Then there are the words which mean doing or being. They are called Verbs. Such are see, write, suffer, come, is. Nouns and Verbs are the two most important kinds of words.

- 7 Then there are the words which describe or tell about Nouns. They are called Adjectives. Such are good, swift, large, many, three. Thus we say good man, swift eagle, three cities. Next come the Pronouns, or words used instead of Nouns. Such are he, they, who. Thus we may say he for John.

There are also the words which usually describe or tell about Verbs. They are called Adverbs. Sometimes they describe Adjectives or other Adverbs. Such are soon, slowly, very. Thus we may say come soon, write slowly, very good.

- 8 Besides these there are the Prepositions, little words placed before Nouns or Pronouns, and often used to bring out the idea of place or time more clearly. Such are in, from, after. Thus we say in school, after dark, seven from ten (= seven taken from ten).

There are also Conjunctions, or joining words, such as and, but, or. Thus we say boys and girls, poor but proud, sink or swim.

Last of all are the Interjections or words of exclamation, such as oh! alas! halloo!

- 9 These eight kinds of words include all the words in a language. They are called the Parts of Speech. The last four, being less important than the others, are called Particles—"little parts" of Speech.

Parts of Speech

- I. Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns,
- II. Verbs, Adverbs,
- III. Prepositions, Conjunctions, Interjections.

THE LATIN LANGUAGE

- 10 The Latin language is so named because it was first spoken by the ancient Latin tribe which inhabited the neighborhood of Rome. It gradually spread until it became the principal language of the Roman Empire, which once covered the whole western civilized world. It lasted as a spoken language well into the Middle Ages, and as the written language of scholars until about the middle of the eighteenth century. Some books are still written in Latin, and some scholars speak it. It is also used in our time as the language of the Roman Catholic Church.

- 11 It is the parent of the modern languages known as Romance languages—such as French, Spanish, and Italian. One-half of all our English words are borrowed from foreign languages, and four-fifths of these borrowed words come either directly or in a roundabout way from the Latin.
- 12 A knowledge of Latin is not only a great help in understanding our own mother-tongue and other modern languages, but it also enables us to read the old Latin books, especially the so-called classical books, which are models of fine style, and contain treasures of information about the life, thought, and deeds of the ancient world. We may thus almost hear the great Romans as they tell their own story in their own words.

FIRST PART: SOUNDS

THE ALPHABET

- 13 The Latin alphabet is the same as the English, except that W is missing.

The Romans wrote their books in capital letters. The small letters came into use early in the Middle Ages, and at the invention of printing, in the fifteenth century, were taken as models for the Roman types. Latin books, as well as most modern books and newspapers, are printed in Roman type.

- 14 K is rarely used.

Y and Z were brought into Latin from Greek in the time of Cicero.

- 15 J as the consonantal form of I and U as the vowel form of V were not invented until the Middle Ages. Although J and U were not used by the Romans, it is convenient to retain them in order to make clear at the start the real difference in sound between J and I, U and V.

VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS

- 16 Six letters are vowels, a, e, i, o, u, y. There are these six diphthongs: ae, oe, au, eu, ei, ui.

However, eu, ei, ui are often sounded separately—not as diphthongs. Other pairs of vowels are not diphthongs; that is, they are rarely or never sounded together as one. Thus iu, ou, ie, ea, and so on, are not diphthongs.

CONSONANTS

17 All the other letters are consonants. They are divided into six classes :

Mutes, Liquids, Nasals, Spirants, Semivowels, Double Consonants.

18 The Mutes (stopped sounds) are divided into

Labials (lip sounds)	p	b	ph
Dentals (tooth sounds)	t	d	th
Gutturals (throat sounds)	c, k, q	g	ch

19 They are also divided into the Smooth or Voiceless	p, t, c, k, q

Middle or Voiced	b, d, g
Rough or Aspirate	ph, th, ch

A voiceless mute is sounded without vibration, and a voiced mute with vibration of the vocal cords. An aspirate is a voiceless mute with the breathing h added.

20 The sound of ph is not the same as f. The aspirates, ph, th, ch, are to be sounded as in up-hill, cart-horse, inkhorn.

21 Table of Mutes

	Smooth or Voiceless	Middle or Voiced	Rough or Aspirate
Labials	p	b	ph
Dentals	t	d	th
Gutturals	c, k, q	g	ch

22 The Liquids (flowing sounds) are l, r. The Nasals (nose sounds) are m, n. When followed by a guttural, n has the sound of n in fling. Thus lingua, tongue, is sounded ling-gwa.

23 The Spirants (breathings) are f, s, h.

24 The Consonants j (sounded like y) and v (sounded like w) are called Semivowels.

- 25 There are two Double Consonants, x and z. x is equal to cs or gs, and z is probably equal to ds.

PRONUNCIATION

- 26 The sounds of the letters, according to the pronunciation of the ancient Romans, are very nearly as follows :

I. VOWELS

The mark $\bar{\quad}$ over a vowel means it is long, and $\acute{\quad}$ that it is short. In this grammar the short vowels are not marked, except in a few special cases. The pupil should carefully remember that every unmarked vowel is short.

\bar{a} as in the last a of ahá .	\check{a} as in the first a of ahá .
\bar{e} as in whey .	\check{e} as in whet .
\bar{i} as in pique .	\check{i} as in pick .
\bar{o} as in omen .	\check{o} as in omit .
\bar{u} as oo in pool .	\check{u} as in put .
\bar{y} , \check{y} , like the Ger- man ü .

- 27 Sometimes u is sounded as w. This always occurs in qu and in ngu before a vowel. Thus quí = kwee and lingua = ling-gwa (see 22). It also occurs in su in the words suāvis, suādeō, suēscō.

28

Diphthongs

ae like ai in aisle .	eu like eu in feud .
oe like oi in oil .	ei like ei in feint .
au like ow in owl .	ui like we .

II. CONSONANTS

29 Consonants are sounded as in English, except that b before s or t = p.

c is always like k.

g is always as in get.

j is always like y in yet.

r is slightly trilled.

s is always as in this, never as in has.

t is always as in notice, never as in notion.

SYLLABLES

30 In pronouncing Latin words the letters are sounded in syllables. A syllable is a separate vowel or diphthong, or a vowel or diphthong sounded with one or more consonants. Thus ē, from, et, and, haec, this, dum, while, are words of one syllable; Rōma, Rome, aurum, gold, are words of two syllables; Rōmānus, Roman, and folium, leaf, are words of three syllables.

A word has as many syllables as it contains separate vowels and diphthongs.

31 In dividing words into syllables :

1. One consonant between two vowels must go with the following vowel. Thus Cae-sar, Caesar, a-xis, axe.

2. Of two or more consonants standing together, as many as may begin a word usually go with the following vowel. Thus ex-trā, beyond, mā-gnus, great. But this rule is not always true, for the division of syllables is as yet imperfectly understood. The combinations of consonants which may not begin a word or syllable are :

(1) Repeated Consonants, as mm, tt. Thus mit-tō, send.

(2) A Liquid or Nasal (l, m, n, r) followed by a consonant. Thus ul-mus, elm, cor-pus, body, am-bō, both.

3. Compound words divide into their component parts. Thus ad-sum, I am here, red-ī, come back.

QUANTITY OF SYLLABLES

32 A syllable is long either by nature or by position.

The Quantity of a syllable, whether long or short, is the time taken in sounding it. A long syllable is said to have twice the time of a short one (— equals ∪∪).

33 I. A syllable is long by nature if it contains a long vowel or a diphthong.

The long vowel in the syllable is always long by nature—not by position. Simple rules can not be given for determining all the vowels that are long. They must be learned by practice. In this grammar all long vowels are marked. See 26.

It is important to notice that

1. Diphthongs, vowels formed from diphthongs, and contracted vowels are long. Thus āurāē, inīquus formed from in + āēquus, cōgō contracted from cō-āgō.

2. A vowel before j, nf, ns, and often before gn, is long. Thus hūjus, infāns, mēnsa, māgnus.

- 34 Most words of one syllable are long by nature. Thus pēs, sōl, dā, tū, quī, sī, ōs (ōris).

But the following are short :

Nouns : vir, lac, mel, fel, cor, os (ossis).

Pronouns : quis, quid, quod, quot, tot, is, id.

Verb forms : dat, stat, it, scit, fer, fac.

Also es from sum, but ēs from edō.

Particles : ab, ad, an, at, sat, et, ut, ob, sub, sed, bis, cis, cum, dum, in, nec, per, ter, vel.

Enclitics : -que, -ve, -ce, -te, -pte, -ne.

- 35 II. A syllable is long by position if it contains a short vowel followed by two or more consonants, or by a double consonant.

Thus the syllable mors, containing a vowel short by nature, is long by position. So the syllable ab is short by nature, but becomes long by position in absolvō. In all such cases the vowel stays short. It is the syllable, never the vowel, which is long by position.

It is important to remember that a vowel followed by nt or nd is regularly short, as amant, amandus. But quīntus, nōndum.

The breathing h is not to be counted a consonant in making position.

- 36 III. Almost all other syllables are short.

Thus a syllable containing a short vowel followed by another vowel, by h, or by a single consonant, is short ; as via, trahō, amat.

The most important exceptions are

1. Some words taken from the Greek, as āēr, Aenēās.
2. Genitives in -ius, as ūnīus. But utrīusque.

37 A syllable is common (long or short at will) if it contains a short vowel followed by a mute and l or r. A common syllable is marked by \surd . Thus te-ně-brae.

Such syllables are common in poetry only. In prose they are short.

ACCENT

38 The last syllable of a word is called the ultima, the next to the last the penult, and the next before the penult the antepenult.

39 Words of two syllables are accented on the penult : pǎ ter, má ter.

40 Words of more than two syllables are accented on the penult, if the penult is long : Rō má nus, pu e rō rum. Otherwise they are accented on the antepenult : tá bu la, ma rí ti mus.

SECOND PART: WORDS

THE PARTS OF SPEECH

- 41 Of the eight Parts of Speech in Latin, the following five change their form to express change of meaning: Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns, Verbs, Adverbs. The Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections do not so change.
- 42 There are three kinds of change: Declension, Comparison, Conjugation.
- All changes of form may be included under the word Inflection, though it is also used in the sense of Declension only.
- 43 Declension is the simpler kind of change. It occurs in the endings of Nouns, Adjectives, and Pronouns.
- 44 Comparison is a special kind of change used to express the degree of Adjectives and Adverbs.
- 45 Conjugation is the more complicated kind of change. It occurs in Verbs.

Table of Inflection

Nouns have	Declension.
Adjectives have	Declension and Comparison.
Pronouns have	Declension.
Verbs have	Conjugation.
Adverbs have	Comparison.

NOUNS

KINDS OF NOUNS

- 47 Nouns are divided into Concrete and Abstract. A Concrete noun is the name of a person, place, or thing: homo, man. An Abstract noun is the name of a quality: amicitia, friendship.
- 48 Concrete nouns are divided into Proper and Common. A Proper noun is the name of some particular person, place, or thing: Caesar, Caesar, Tiberis, the Tiber. All others are Common.

GENDERS OF NOUNS

- 49 There are three Genders: Masculine, Feminine, Neuter. Gender is either Natural or Grammatical.
- 50 The rule for Natural Gender is:
Names of males are Masculine; names of females are Feminine. Thus pater, father, Cicerō, Cicero; sōror, sister, Jūnō, Juno.

51 The rules for Grammatical Gender are :

1. Names of rivers, winds, and months are Masculine : Rhēnus, Rhine, Eurus, east wind.

2. Most names of countries, islands, towns, and trees are Feminine : Corinthus, Corinth, Aegyptus, Egypt, quercus, oak.

3. Indeclinable nouns are Neuter : nihil, nothing.

4. The gender of other nouns is shown by the ending of the Nominative Singular. See 59, 64, 88-90, 93, 97.

52 Some nouns have two grammatical and natural genders—masculine and feminine. Thus parēns, parent, comes, companion. They are said to have Common Gender. Some names of animals have one grammatical and the two natural genders : aquila, f., eagle, ānser, m., goose or gander. They are called Epicenes.

NUMBERS OF NOUNS

53 There are two Numbers, the Singular meaning one, and the Plural meaning more than one. Thus arbor, sing., tree, arborēs, pl., trees.

CASES OF NOUNS

54 Nouns change their endings to express change in meaning. Thus porta, a gate, portae, of a gate.

The body of the word is called the Stem, to which is attached the Ending.

The Ending is properly the part attached to the last letter of the Stem. In portā-s the ending is attached without change and in portae (for old portā-ī) with change. Some cases have no Ending. Oftentimes the last letter or letters of the stem are weakened, otherwise altered, or lost; as in the Nominatives porta, gate, from the older stem portā-, puer, boy, from puero-, leō, lion, from leōn-, virgō, maiden, from virgin-. The changes made in forming the Cases are too complicated for a beginner in grammar. For convenience, therefore, the changeable part at the end of a noun is allowed to stand as the Ending.

55 Such changes of form are called Cases. There are six Cases, both in the Singular and in the Plural.

Table of Cases

Name of Case	Answers the Questions	Principal Use
1. Nominative	What? who?	Subject
2. Genitive	Of what? whose?	In defining nouns and adjectives
3. Dative	To, for what or whom?	Indirect object
4. Accusative	What? whom?	Direct object
5. Vocative	Direct address
6. Ablative	With, from, in, by what or whom?	Like an adverb

Another Case, the Locative, denoting the place where, survives in names of towns and in a few other words: Rōmae, at Rome, domī, at home.

DECLENSIONS OF NOUNS

56 The Cases taken together make up the Declension of a noun. There are five different Declensions. They may be known apart by the last letter of the Stem or by the Genitive Ending. Thus the Stem of porta ends in a, and the Ending of portae, the Genitive Singular, is ae.

Table of Declensions

Declension	Last Letter of Stem	Genitive Ending
First	ǎ (ā)	-ae
Second	ō	-ī
Third	ŷ or a consonant	-īs
Fourth	ŭ	-ūs
Fifth	ē	-ēī

58 The following Cases have the same Ending :

1. Nominative and Vocative, except in the Singular of the Second Declension when the Nominative ends in -us.
2. Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative of Neuter nouns. In the Plural these end in -a.
3. Nominative and Accusative Plural of all nouns in the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Declensions.
4. Dative and Ablative Plural.

FIRST DECLENSION

59 The Stem originally ended in ā, later in a.

Nouns of the First Declension have the Nominative Singular ending in -a, and are of the Feminine Gender. They are declined as follows :

mēnsa (Stem mēnsa-), f., table

	Case	Meaning	Ending
SING.
Nom.	mēnsa	a table	-a
Gen.	mēnsae	of a table	-ae
Dat.	mēnsae	to or for a table	-ae
Acc.	mēnsam	a table	-am
Voc.	mēnsa	O table!	-a
Abl.	mēnsā	with, from, in, by a table	-ā
PLURAL
Nom.	mēnsae	tables	-ae
Gen.	mēnsārum	of tables	-ārum
Dat.	mēnsīs	to or for tables	-īs
Acc.	mēnsās	tables	-ās
Voc.	mēnsae	O tables!	-ae
Abl.	mēnsīs	with, from, in, by tables	-īs

Latin has no Article: mēnsa, table, a table, the table.

- 60 A few nouns in -a are Masculine, as nauta, sailor, scrība, clerk. See 50.
- 61 The Locative Singular ends in -ae, the Locative Plural in -īs; Rōmae, at Rome, Athēnīs, at Athens.
- 62 In a few nouns the old Genitive Singular in -āi, -ās sometimes occurs; aulāi, of the hall, familiās, of the family.

A few nouns have the Genitive Plural in -um, not in -ārum. Thus amphora, a jar, amphorum, of jars, caelicola, a celestial, caelicolum, of celestials.

The Dative and Ablative Plural of dea, goddess, filia, daughter, end in -ābus.

GREEK NOUNS

- 63 Greek nouns ending in -ē are Feminine. Those ending in -ās or -ēs are Masculine. In the Plural they are declined like mēnsa, and in the Singular as follows:

	epitomē, f., epitome	Aenēās, m., Aeneas	Anchīsēs, m., Anchises
Nom.	epitomē	Aenēās	Anchīsēs
Gen.	epitomēs	Aenēae	Anchisae
Dat.	epitomae	Aenēae	Anchisae
Acc.	epitomēn	Aenēān (-am)	Anchisēn
Voc.	epitomē	Aenēā (-a)	Anchisē (-ā, -a)
Abl.	epitomē	Aenēā	Anchisē (-ā)

SECOND DECLENSION

64 The Stem ends in o, which is often absorbed in the case-endings or lost altogether. Nouns of the Second Declension ending in -us, -er, -ir are Masculine, those in -um are Neuter.

65 Nouns in -us and -um

	hortus, m., garden Stem hortō-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	hortus	-us
Gen.	hortī	-ī
Dat.	hortō	-ō

	bellum, n., war Stem bellō-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	bellum	-um
Gen.	bellī	-ī
Dat.	bellō	-ō
Acc.	bellum	-um
Voc.	bellum	-um
Abl.	bellō	-ō
PLURAL
Nom.	bella	-a
Gen.	bellōrum	-ōrum
Dat.	bellīs	-īs
Acc.	bella	-a
Voc.	bella	-a
Abl.	bellīs	-īs

Nouns in -er and -ir

	ager, m., field Stem agrō-	puer, m., boy Stem puerō-	vir, m., man Stem virō-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	ager	puer	vir	nōne
Gen.	agrī	puerī	virī	-ī
Dat.	agrō	puerō	virō	-ō
Acc.	agrum	puerum	virum	-um
Voc.	ager	puer	vir	nōne
Abl.	agrō	puerō	virō	-ō
PLURAL
Nom.	agrī	puerī	virī	-ī
Gen.	agrōrum	puerōrum	virōrum	-ōrum
Dat.	agrīs	puerīs	virīs	-īs
Acc.	agrōs	puerōs	virōs	-ōs
Voc.	agrī	puerī	virī	-ī
Abl.	agrīs	puerīs	virīs	-īs

67 Most nouns in -er are declined like ager, developing an e before the r in the Nominative and Vocative Singular. But decline gener, son-in-law, socer, father-in-law, liberī, children, vesper, evening, like puer. Note that liber, book, is like ager.

68 Some nouns in -us are Feminine, according to the general rules in 50 and 51. Thus pirus, f., pear-tree.

Also these five: alvus, belly, carbasus, linen, colus, distaff (94), humus, ground, vannus, fan.

Three in -us are Neuter: pelagus, sea, vīrus, poison, vulgus, crowd.

69 The Locative Singular ends in -ī, the Locative Plural in -īs; domī, at home, Argīs, at Argos.

Nouns in -ius and -ium have the Genitive Singular in -ī or -iī, keeping the accent on the same syllable as in the Nominative. Thus ingénium, disposition, has ingēnī or ingēnī.

- 70 But Proper nouns in -ius have both the Genitive and Vocative Singular in -ī: Vergīlius, Virgil, Vergīlī, of Virgil or O Virgil. Notice that the accent in these Genitives and Vocatives is always on the penult.

The Vocative Singular of fīlius son, is fīlī.

- 71 deus, god, has no Vocative Singular. The Plural is as follows:

Nom.	deī, dī
Gen.	deōrum, deum
Dat.	deīs, dīs
Acc.	deōs
Voc.	deī, dī
Abl.	deīs, dīs

GREEK NOUNS

- 72 Greek nouns in -os, -ōs are Masculine or Feminine. Those in -on are Neuter. In the Plural most of them are declined like hortus, if Masculine or Feminine, and like bellum, if Neuter. In the Singular they are declined as follows:

	Dēlos, f., Delos	Androgeōs, m., Androgeos
Nom.	Dēlos	Androgeōs
Gen.	Dēlī	Androgeō, -ī
Dat.	Dēlō	Androgeō
Acc.	Dēlum, -on	Androgeō, -ōn
Voc.	Dēle	Androgeōs
Abl.	Dēlō	Androgeō

	Īlion, n., Troy	mythos, m., fable
Nom.	Īlion	mythos
Gen.	Īlī	mythī
Dat.	Īliō	mythō
Acc.	Īlion	mython
Voc.	Īlion	mythe
Abl.	Īliō	mythō

THIRD DECLENSION

73 The Stem ends in -ī or a consonant, and the nouns are divided according to their Stems into four classes, as follows :

- A. Consonant Stems. C. Mixed Stems.
 B. ī- Stems. D. Rare and Irregular.

74 The Nominative Singular ends in one of the following letters :

- a, -e, -ī, -ō, -y,
 -c, -l, -n, -r, -s, -t, -x.

All these may be remembered by the words irons exactly.

A. CONSONANT STEMS

75 The Consonant Stems end in a Mute, Liquid, Nasal, or Spirant. See 17. The Mute Stems end in a Labial, Dental, or Guttural. See 18.

I. MUTE STEMS

76 1. Stems ending in a Labial : b or p

	trabs, f., beam Stem trab-	prīnceps, m., chief Stem prīncip-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	trabs	prīnceps	-s
Gen.	trabis	prīncipis	-is
Dat.	trabī	prīncipī	-ī
Acc.	trabem	prīncipem	-em
Voc.	trabs	prīnceps	-s
Abl.	trabe	prīncipe	-e
PLURAL
Nom.	trabēs	prīncipēs	-ēs
Gen.	trabum	prīncipum	-um
Dat.	trabibus	prīncipibus	-ibus
Acc.	trabēs	prīncipēs	-ēs
Voc.	trabēs	prīncipēs	-ēs
Abl.	trabibus	prīncipibus	-ibus

Notice that the i in the last syllable of the Stem prīncip- is changed to e in the Nominative and Vocative Singular. This usually occurs in every kind of consonant stem of two syllables containing i in the last syllable.

77

2. Stems ending in a Dental : d or t

	lapis, m., stone Stem lapid-	mīles, m., soldier Stem milit-	aetās, f., age Stem aetāt-
SING. Nom. Gen. Dat. Acc. ✓Voc. Abl.	lapis lapidis lapidī lapidem lapis lapide	miles militis militī militem miles militē	aetās aetātis aetātī aetātem aetās aetāte
PLURAL Nom. Gen. Dat. Acc. Voc. Abl.	lapidēs lapidum lapidibus lapidēs lapidēs lapidibus	militēs militum militibus militēs militēs militibus	aetātēs aetātum aetātibus aetātēs aetātēs aetātibus

Notice that final t and d of the Stem are lost before -s.

78

3. Stems ending in a Guttural : g or c

	rēx, m., king Stem rēg-	rādīx, f., root Stem rādīc-	dux, m. and f., leader Stem duc-
SING. Nom. Gen. Dat. Acc. Voc. Abl.	rēx rēgis rēgī rēgem rēx rēge	rādīx rādīcis rādīcī rādīcem rādīx rādīce	dux ducis ducī ducem dux duce
PLURAL Nom. Gen. Dat. Acc. Voc. Abl.	rēgēs rēgum rēgibus rēgēs rēgēs rēgibus	rādīcēs rādīcium rādīcibus rādīcēs rādīcēs rādīcibus	ducēs ducum ducibus ducēs ducēs ducibus Notice that final g and c of the Stem combine with -s of the Ending to form the double consonant x. See 25.

79

II. LIQUID STEMS ; l OR r

	cōnsul , m., consul Stem cōnsul-	victor , m., victor Stem victōr-	aequor , n., sea Stem aequōr-	Ending
SING.				m., f.	n.
Nom.	cōnsul	victor	aequor	—	—
Gen.	cōnsulis	victōris	aequoris	-is	-is
Dat.	cōnsulī	victōrī	aequorī	-ī	-ī
Acc.	cōnsulem	victōrem	aequor	-em	—
Voc.	cōnsul	victor	aequor	—	—
Abl.	cōnsule	victōre	aequore	-e	-e
PLURAL
Nom.	cōnsulēs	victōrēs	aequora	-ēs	-a
Gen.	cōnsulum	victōrum	aequorum	-um	-um
Dat.	cōnsulibus	victōribus	aequoribus	-ibus	-ibus
Acc.	cōnsulēs	victōrēs	aequora	-ēs	-a
Voc.	cōnsulēs	victōrēs	aequora	-ēs	-a
Abl.	cōnsulibus	victōribus	aequoribus	-ibus	-ibus

Notice that Liquid Stems form the Nominative and Vocative Singular of Masculine and Feminine nouns and the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative Singular of Neuter nouns without the case-ending.

80

III. NASAL STEMS : n

	leō , m., lion Stem leōn-	virgō , f., maiden Stem virgin-	nōmen , n., name Stem nōmin-
SING.
Nom.	leō	virgō	nōmen
Gen.	leōnis	virginis	nōminis
Dat.	leōnī	virginī	nōminī
Acc.	leōnem	virginem	nōmen
Voc.	leō	virgō	nōmen
Abl.	leōne	virgine	nōmine
PLURAL
Nom.	leōnēs	virginēs	nōmina
Gen.	leōnum	virginum	nōminum
Dat.	leōnibus	virginibus	nōminibus
Acc.	leōnēs	virginēs	nōmina
Voc.	leōnēs	virginēs	nōmina
Abl.	leōnibus	virginibus	nōminibus

Notice that Nasal Stems often lose final n in the Nominative and Vocative Singular. Their case-endings are the same as for Liquid Stems.

81

IV. SPIRANT STEMS : s

	mōs , m., custom Stem mōs-	honor , m., honor Stem honōs-	corpus , n., body Stem corpos-
SING.
Nom.	mōs	honor	corpus
Gen.	mōris	honōris	corporis
Dat.	mōrī	honōrī	corporī
Acc.	mōrem	honōrem	corpus
Voc.	mōs	honor	corpus
Abl.	mōre	honōre	corpore
PLURAL
Nom.	mōrēs	honōrēs	corpora
Gen.	mōrum	honōrum	corporum
Dat.	mōribus	honōribus	corporibus
Acc.	mōrēs	honōrēs	corpora
Voc.	mōrēs	honōrēs	corpora
Abl.	mōribus	honōribus	corporibus

Notice that the final s of Spirant Stems changes to r between two vowels, and becomes r in the Nominative and Vocative Singular of honor, arbor, clāmor, color, dolor.

82

B. ī-STEMSI. WITH NOMINATIVE IN -is

	turris , f., tower Stem turri-	īgnis , m., fire Stem īgni-	hostis , m. f., foe Stem hosti-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	turris	īgnis	hostis	-is
Gen.	turris	īgnis	hostis	-is
Dat.	turrī	īgnī	hostī	-ī
Acc.	turrim, -em	īgnem	hostem	-im, -em
Voc.	turris	īgnis	hostis	-is
Abl.	turrī, -e	īgnī, -e	hoste	-ī, -e
PLURAL
Nom.	turrēs	īgnēs	hostēs	-ēs
Gen.	turrium	īgnium	hostium	-ium
Dat.	turribus	īgnibus	hostibus	-ibus
Acc.	turrīs, -ēs	īgnīs, -ēs	hostīs, -ēs	-īs, -ēs
Voc.	turrēs	īgnēs	hostēs	-ēs
Abl.	turribus	īgnibus	hostibus	-ibus

Notice that these nouns end in -is in the Nominative Singular and in -ium in the Genitive Plural. The original endings -im, -ī (in Ablative), and -īs are less common than the later -em, -e, -ēs. The Accusative in -im and Ablative in -ī occur in the following important nouns:

Always in sitis, thirst, tussis, cough, and names of towns and rivers in -is: Neāpolis, Naples, Tiberis, the Tiber.

Often in restis, rope, secūris, axe, turris, tower.

Sometimes in clāvis, key, messis, harvest, nāvis, ship.

There are many nouns in -is, some of them formed from Consonant Stems. In the following nouns in -is the Genitive Plural in -um, not in -ium, occurs:

Always in juvenis, young man, senex, old man, canis, dog, pānis, bread.

Sometimes in mēnsis, month, sēdēs, seat, vātēs, bard.

II. WITH NOMINATIVE IN -e, -al, -ar

	cubīle , n., couch Stem cubīli-	animāl , n., animal Stem animāli-	calcar , n., spur Stem calcāri-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	cubīle	animāl	calcar	none
Gen.	cubīlis	animālis	calcāris	-is
Dat.	cubīlī	animālī	calcārī	-ī
Acc.	cubīle	animāl	calcar	none
Voc.	cubīle	animāl	calcar	none
Abl.	cubīlī	animālī	calcārī	-ī
PLURAL
Nom.	cubīlia	animālia	calcāria	-ia
Gen.	cubīlium	animālium	calcārium	-ium
Dat.	cubīlibus	animālībus	calcārībus	-ibus
Acc.	cubīlia	animālia	calcāria	-ia
Voc.	cubīlia	animālia	calcāria	-ia
Abl.	cubīlibus	animālībus	calcārībus	-ibus

Notice that final i of the Stem is either lost or changed to e. The Ablative Singular ends in -ī, the Genitive Plural in -ium, and the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative Plural in -ia.

C. MIXED STEMS

84 These appear to be Consonant Stems treated in the Plural as ī- Stems.

	nūbēs, f., cloud Stem nūb(i)-	urbs, f., city Stem urb(i)-	arx, f., citadel Stem arc(i)-	imber, m., shower Stem imbr(i)-	Ending
SING.
Nom.	nūbēs	urbs	arx	imber	-s
Gen.	nūbīs	urbīs	arcīs	imbrīs	-īs
Dat.	nūbī	urbī	arcī	imbrī	-ī
Acc.	nūbem	urbem	arcem	imbrem	-em
Voc.	nūbēs	urbs	arx	imber	-s
Abl.	nūbe	urbe	arce	imbre, -ī	-e, -ī
PLURAL
Nom.	nūbēs	urbēs	arcēs	imbrēs	-ēs
Gen.	nūbīum	urbīum	arcīum	imbrīum	-īum
Dat.	nūbibus	urbibus	arcibus	imbribus	-ibus
Acc.	nūbēs, -īs	urbēs, -īs	arcēs, -īs	imbrēs, -īs	-ēs, -īs
Voc.	nūbēs	urbēs	arcēs	imbrēs	-ēs
Abl.	nūbibus	urbibus	arcibus	imbribus	-ibus

Notice the Genitive Plural ends in -ium, and the Accusative Plural in -ēs or -īs.

Important nouns with Mixed Stems are :

1. Nouns in -ēs, with Genitive in -īs; as aedēs, temple, caedēs, slaughter, clādēs, disaster, nūbēs, cloud, rūpēs, rock.

2. Most monosyllables in -s or -x preceded by a consonant; as arx, citadel, calx, heel, stirps, stock, urbs, city.

Also dēns, gēns, mēns, fōns, mōns, pōns,
ars, pars, sors.

3. Most nouns in -ns, -rs; as cliēns, tridēns, cohors.

4. fūr, līs, mās, mūs, nix.

IMPORTANT EXCEPTIONS

1. In -l.

Masculine : sāl, salt, sōl, sun.

2. In -ur, -us.

Masculine : vultur, vulture, lepus, hare.

GREEK NOUNS

91 Greek nouns of the Third Declension often take the regular Latin endings, but sometimes preserve their Greek endings, particularly the following :

1. -ā in Accusative Singular.

2. -ēs in Nominative Plural.

3. -ās in Accusative Plural.

4. -īs in Dative and Ablative Plural of Neuters in -ma.

	hērōs, m., hero	lampas, f., torch	poēma, n., poem

4. opis, opī, opem, ope, help, has four cases only in the singular. It lacks the Nominative and Vocative.

III. VARIABLE

104 Nouns varying their meaning in the Plural :

aedēs , temple	aedēs , house auxilium , help	auxilia , auxiliaries castrum , castle	castra , camp cōpia , plenty	cōpiae , troops fīnis , end	fīnēs , boundaries grātia , favor	grātiae , thanks impedīmentum , hindrance	impedīmenta , baggage littera , letter of alphabet	litterae , epistle
mōs , custom	mōrēs , morals, character
(ops) opis , help	opēs , resources pars , part	partēs , a party

105 Nouns varying in Gender (Heterogeneous).

1. In the singular :

clipeus, clipeum, shield.

2. In the plural :

locī, m., topics, loca, n., places ;
jocī, m., and joca, n., jests.3. Between the singular and plural : caelum, n., heaven, caelī, m., the heavens ; epulum, n., and epulae, f., feast.

106 Nouns varying in Declension (Heteroclitics).

1. First and Fifth. Some First Declension nouns in -ia have Fifth Declension forms in -iēs, as māteria, māteriēs, matter.2. Second and Third : jūgerum, -ī, acre ; plural jūgera, -um, -ibus ; vās, vāsis, jar ; plural vāsa, vāsōrum.3. Second and Fourth : domus, house. See 95.4. Third and Fifth : plēbs, -bis, or plēbēs, -eī, the people. Two nouns of the Third Declension, requiēs, rest, and famēs, hunger, take respectively the additional Fifth Declension forms requiem and famē.

ADJECTIVES

107 Adjectives are declined like Nouns, and have three genders in each case. Thus, Nominative bonus, m., bona, f., bonum, n., good. Adjectives are divided into—

I. Adjectives of the First and Second Declensions.

II. Adjectives of the Third Declension.

I. ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

111 Most adjectives in -er are declined like sacer. A few are like liber; as asper, rough, miser, wretched, tener, tender. dexter, right, is declined both ways: dextera, dexterum, or dextra, dextrum.

112 Nine adjectives have -ius throughout the Genitive Singular and -ī throughout the Dative Singular:

ūnus	ūna	ūnum	one
sōlus	sōla	sōlum	alone
tōtus	tōta	tōtum	whole
ūllus	ūlla	ūllum	any nūllus	nūlla	nūllum	not any, no
alius	alia	aliud	another alter	altera	alterum	the other uter	utra	utrum	which (of two)? neuter	neutra	neutrum	neither

These adjectives have no Vocative. The Genitive of alter is alterius. This is regularly used in place of the Genitive alius, which is very rare.

Notice -d in the Neuter Singular ending of alius in Nominative and Accusative.

II. ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION

113 These are divided, according to their Endings in the Nominative, into

1. Adjectives of Three Endings.
2. Adjectives of Two Endings.
3. Adjectives of One Ending.

Except Comparatives, they are nearly all declined like ī-Stems.

1. Adjectives of Three Endings

114

	fortiōribus	fortiōribus
	fortiōrēs	fortiōra
	fortiōrēs	fortiōra
	fortiōribus	fortiōribus

Comparatives are declined like fortior. Notice in fortior the Ablative Singular in -e, the Genitive Plural in -um, and the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative Plural Neuter in -a. The endings -ī (Ablative) and -īs occur, but are rare.

3. *Adjectives of One Endingfēlix, happy

	amantēs	amantia
	amantium	amantium
	amantibus	amantibus
	amantēs, -īs	amantia
	amantēs	amantia
	amantibus	amantibus

In the Ablative Singular -e for -ī often occurs in poetry, but is not common in prose of the classical period, except in Participles in -āns and -ēns used as nouns or occurring in the Ablative Absolute (397). Thus amante, lover, mē imperante, by my command.

- 117 Less regular are such Adjectives of One Ending as the following :

vetus, old

memor, mindful

plūs, more

Like vetus in case-endings are dīves (gen. dīvitis), rich, pauper (gen. pauperis), poor, particeps (gen. participis), sharing, prīnceps (gen. prīncipis), chief. Like memor is inops (gen. inopis), needy.

- 118 Indeclinable Adjectives : frūgī, thrifty, nēquam, worthless, and most Cardinal Numeral Adjectives. See 132.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Regular Comparison

- 119 Adjectives are compared in three Degrees—the Positive, Comparative, and Superlative ; as fortis, fortior, fortissimus, strong, stronger, strongest.

- 120 The Comparative is formed by adding -ior (neuter -ius), and the Superlative by adding -issimus (-a, -um) to the Stem of the Positive.

When the stem ends in a vowel, the vowel is dropped.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
altus, high	altior, higher	altissimus, highest fēlix, happy	fēlicior, happier	fēlicissimus, happiest

- 121 Participles used as Adjectives are compared in the same way :

amāns, loving	amantior, more loving	amantissimus, most loving
----------------------	------------------------------	----------------------------------

- 122 But Adjectives in -er form the Superlative by adding -rimus to the Nominative of the Positive :

liber, free	liberior	liberrimus
ācer, sharp	ācrior	ācerrimus

- 123 Six Adjectives in -ilis form the Superlative by adding -limus to the stem of the Positive less its final vowel :

facilis, easy	facilior	facillimus
difficilis, difficult	difficilior	difficillimus
similis, like	similior	simillimus dissimilis, unlike	dissimilior	dissimillimus humilis, low	humilior	humillimus
gracilis, slender	gracilior	gracillimus

- 124 Adjectives in -dicus, -ficus, -volus are compared as if ending in -dīcēns, -ficēns, -volēns :

maledicus, slanderous	maledīcentior	maledīcentissimus
māgnificus, magnificent	māgnificentior	māgnificentissimus
benevolus, kindly	benevolentior	benevolentissimus

Also

egēnus, needy	egentior	egentissimus
prōvidus, foreseeing	prōvidentior	prōvidentissimus

Comparison by magis and m̄ximē

- 129 Some Adjectives have no endings of Comparison, and use instead the Adverbs magis, more, and m̄ximē, most. They include most Adjectives in -eus, -ius, -uus (except -quus), as

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
idōneus, fit	magis idōneus	m̄ximē idōneus

NUMERALS

- 130 Numerals include Numeral Adjectives and Numeral Adverbs.

Numeral Adjectives are of three kinds :

· Cardinal : as ūnus, one, duo, two, trēs, three.

Ordinal : as p̄rimus, first, secundus, second.

Distributive : as singulī, one by one, bīnī, two by two.

Declension of Numeral Adjectives

- 131 The only Cardinals declined are ūnus, duo, trēs, and the hundreds above centum. The latter are declined like the plural of bonus : ducentī, -ae, -a, two hundred.

M.	mille	millēsīmus	singula mīlia	milliēs
MM.	duo mīlia	bis millēsīmus	bīna mīlia	bis milliēs

- 133 mille, thousand, in its singular form is an indeclinable adjective. Thus mille militēs, a thousand soldiers. Its plural, mīlia, is a noun, and is declined mīlia, mīlium, mīlibus, mīlia, mīlia, mīlibus. Thus duo mīlia means two thousands of anything. The things thus numbered usually go in the Genitive: duo mīlia militum, two thousand soldiers.
- 134 All Ordinals are declined like bonus; all Distributives like the plural of bonus.
- 135 The following signs and their combinations are used for the various numbers: I = 1, V = 5, X = 10, L = 50, C = 100, D = 500, M = 1,000. In combining these the larger numeral regularly precedes. Thus VI = 6, XVI = 16, LVI = 56, and so on. When the smaller numeral precedes, it is to be read by subtraction. This occurs in the numerals IV = 4, IX = 9, XL = 40, XC = 90, and their combinations. Thus XCIX = 99.

PRONOUNS

- 136 Pronouns are divided into—
- I. Personal and Reflexive
 - II. Possessive
 - III. Demonstrative
 - IV. Intensive
 - V. Relative
 - VI. Interrogative
 - VII. Indefinite

I. PERSONAL AND REFLEXIVE

- 137 The Personal Pronouns are ego, I, the pronoun of the first person, and tū, thou, the pronoun of the second person. There is no personal pronoun of the third person. Its place is taken by the Demonstratives is and ille (see 141).

vōbīs	with, from, by you nostrum and vestrum usually have a Partitive meaning: quis nostrum, who of us?

138 The Reflexive Pronouns of the first and second persons are supplied from the Personal Pronouns. The Reflexive of the third person is suī, of himself (herself, itself, themselves).

II. POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS

139 The Possessive Pronouns are formed from the Personal Pronouns. They are—meus, my noster, our for the first person tuus, thy vester, your for the second person suus, his, theirs for the third person

They are really Adjectives, and are declined like bonus and liber. See 108, 109. The Vocative Singular Masculine of meus is mī.

140 suus is used only in a Reflexive sense, usually referring to the subject of the sentence in which it stands. See 421. Thus filium suum laudat means he praises his (own) son, but filium illius laudat means he praises his (another person's) son.

III. DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS

141 These point out persons or things with regard to where they are. The Demonstratives are—hic, this (near me) for the first person iste, that (near you) for the second person ille, that (near him) for the third person

Also is, that (like ille, but less definite).

idem, that same, the same (made of is + -dem).

They have no Vocative. The forms of is and ille often mean he, she, it, or they. See 137.

IV. INTENSIVE PRONOUN

The Intensive Pronoun ipse, self, self-same, is declined like iste, except that the Nominative and Accusative Singular Neuter is ipsum.

Abl.	quō	quā	quō	quibus	quibus	quibus

The old Ablative quī for all genders sometimes occurs. Also quīs instead of quibus.

VI. INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS

148 The Interrogative Pronouns are quis, who? which is used as a Noun, and quī, what (sort of)? which is used as an Adjective.

quis, who?

Sing.	M. and F.	N.
Nom.	quis	quid
Gen.	cūjus	cūjus
Dat.	cui	cui
Acc.	quem	quid
Abl.	quō	quō

The Interrogative quis, who? in the plural, and quī, what (sort of)? in both numbers, are declined in the same way as the Relative quī.

VII. INDEFINITE PRONOUNS

149 The Indefinite Pronouns are quis and quī, any one, some one, and their compounds. The principal Indefinite Pronouns are quis , any one	quī (adjective), any aliquis , some one	aliquī (adjective), any quisquam , any one	quīdam , a certain one quisque , each	quīlibet , which you please quispiam , any one	quīvīs , which you will

quisquis , whoever	quīcumque , whoever

Also ecquis, (whether) any nē quis, (lest) any sī quis, (if) any nesciō quis, some one or other

150 quīdam has Accusative singular quendam, quandam, and Genitive plural quōrundam, quārundam.

quis and aliquis have the ending -a instead of -ae in the Nominative Singular Feminine and the Nominative and Accusative Plural Neuter.

quisquis is used in the Singular only.

Pronominal and Correlative Adjectives

- 151 The following Pronominal Adjectives are conveniently added here (see 112) :

alter , the other	alius , another uter , which	neuter , neither ūllus , any	nūllus , none, no

- 152 Also these pairs of Correlatives (see 154) :

tālis , of such kind	quālis , as tantus , so great	quantus , as
tot , so many	quot , as

- 153 Tables of Pronouns

Of First Person	ego	meī	meus noster	hīc
Of Second Person	tū	tuī	tuus vester	iste
Of Third Person	(ille)	suī	suus	ille

- 154 A Relative or Interrogative is often paired with a corresponding Demonstrative ; as quantus, how great, tantus, so great ; ex quō, from what (time), ex illō, from that (time). Such pairs are called Correlatives. The following are important to remember :

Correlative Pairs

	Relative or Interrogative	Demonstrative
Simple Number (how many)	quī, quis quot	hīc, iste, ille, is tot
Quantity (how large)	quantus	tantus
Quality (what kind)	quālis	tālis

VERBS

155 The Verb (verbum, the word) is the chief word in Latin, as in other languages. It alone brings out a complete thought, and hence can make a sentence by itself. It has greater changes of form than any other Part of Speech. Its Inflection is called Conjugation.

156 A Verb changes its form in five ways—by Voice, Mood, Tense, Number, and Person.

There are

Two Voices : Active, Passive.

Three Moods : Indicative, Subjunctive, Imperative.

Six Tenses : Present, Imperfect, Future, Perfect, Pluperfect, Future Perfect.

Two Numbers : Singular, Plural.

Three Persons : First, Second, Third.

157 To these five forms of change which constitute the entire Verb proper, usually called the Finite Verb, are to be added :

Verbal forms used as Nouns : Infinitive, Gerund, Supine.

Verbal forms used as Adjectives : Participle and Gerundive.

VOICES

158 The Active Voice is used to express the Subject of the Verb as acting or being. Thus amō, I love, est, he is.

The Passive Voice is used to express the Subject of the Verb as acted upon. Thus amor, I am loved.

Transitive Verbs are conjugated in both Voices, Intransitive Verbs almost entirely in the Active. A Transitive Verb is one which takes a Direct Object to fill out its meaning: illum videō, I see him. Intransitive Verbs, from their meaning, do not take a Direct Object: maneō, I remain.

MOODS

159 The Indicative Mood states the action of the Verb as a fact: amō, I love, amābō, I shall love.

The Subjunctive Mood states the action of the Verb as willed, desired, or possible: amet, let him love, may he love, he may love.

The Imperative Mood states the action of the Verb as a command: amā, love thou!

TENSES

160 The six Tenses are used to express the Action of the Verb as Uncompleted or Completed.

1. Three for Uncompleted Action :

Present : amō, I love (I am loving, I do love).

Imperfect : amābam, I was loving (I loved).

Future : amābō, I shall love.

2. Three for Completed Action :

Perfect : amāvī, *I have loved, I loved.*Pluperfect : amāveram, *I had loved.*Future Perfect : amāverō, I shall have loved.

The Indicative Mood has all six Tenses, the Subjunctive four (no Future and Future Perfect), and the Imperative only two—the Present and Future.

The Perfect Tense has two uses :

1. The Present Perfect—the Perfect with have : amāvī, I have loved.

2. The Past or Historical Perfect : amāvī, I loved.

161 The six Tenses are also used to express the Time of the Verb as Past, Present, or Future. Those which express Present or Future time are called Principal Tenses, and those which express Past time are called Historical Tenses.

The Principal Tenses are the Present : amō, *I love.*Present Perfect : amāvī, *I have loved.*Future : amābō, *I shall love.*Future Perfect : amāverō, I shall have loved.

The Historical Tenses are the Imperfect : amābam, *I was loving.*Historical Perfect : amāvī, *I loved.*Pluperfect : amāveram, I had loved.

NUMBERS AND PERSONS

162 Verbs have two Numbers, the Singular and Plural :

Thus amat, he loves, amant, they love.

163 Verbs have three Persons, the First, Second, and Third :

Thus amō, I love, amās, you love, amat, he loves.

CONJUGATION OF VERBS

164 Verbs change their form, or are conjugated, by adding Personal Endings (usually combined with Signs of Tense and Mood) to the different Stems.

I. STEMS

165 A complete Verb has three Stems—the Present Stem, the Perfect Stem, and the Participial Stem.

166 In regular Verbs the Present or simple Stem is changed into the Perfect Stem by adding v (u) or s, and into the Participial Stem by adding t.

PRESENT STEM	PERFECT STEM	PARTICIPIAL STEM
amā- , love	amāv- , loved	amātmonē- , advise	monu- , advised	mon(i)tdūc- , lead	dūx- (= dūcs), led	ductaudī- , hear	audīv- , heard	audīt-

These changes are sometimes connected with other changes, which are to be learned as they happen in the different Conjugations.

II. TENSE AND MOOD SIGNS¹

167 The different Tenses and Moods are shown by the part between the Stem and the Ending. Thus -bi- serves as a sign of the Future Indicative: amā-bi-t (love-will-he), he will love.

The Tense and Mood Signs of the Finite Verb are given in the following tables :

1. Those joined to the Present Stem in both Active and Passive Voices.

	Indicative	Subjunctive	Imperative
Present	—	-ā- -ē-	—
Imperfect	-(ē)bā-	-rē-	tense lacking
Future	-bi- -ē- (-a-)	tense lacking	-tō-

2. Those joined to the Perfect Stem in the Active Voice.

	Indicative	Subjunctive
Perfect	-ī-	-eri-
Pluperfect	-erā-	-issē-
Future Perfect	-eri-	tense lacking

For Tense and Mood Signs of the Imperative see 168.

¹ The term Tense and Mood Sign, while not a scientifically accurate expression, is a convenient name for that part of the Verb which, in the developed classical language, actually distinguishes the various Tenses and Moods. An analysis of the formative elements of the Tenses and Moods is too complicated and vexed a problem for an elementary grammar.

3. In the Passive Voice the Perfect, Pluperfect, and Future Perfect Tenses are formed by adding forms of sum to the Perfect Passive Participle. Thus amātus sum, I have been loved; amātus eram, I had been loved.

All Participles and Participial forms of the Verb are declined like Adjectives. Thus :

amāns, genitive amantis (116)

amātūrus, -a, -um (sum) amātus, -a, -um (sum)

amandus, -a, -um (sum)

III. PERSONAL ENDINGS

168 The Personal Endings denote Voice, Person, and Number. They are given in the following table :

Person	ACTIVE				PASSIVE
	Ind. & Subj.		Imperative		Ind. & Subj.		Imperative
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plural	Sing.	Pl.	Sing.	Plural
First	-m, -ō	-mus	not used	not used	-r	-mur	not used	not used
Second	-s	-tis	—, -tō	-tē, -tōte	-ris, -re	-minī	-re, -tor	-minī
Third	-t	-nt	-tō	-ntō	-tur	-ntur	-tor	-ntor

The Endings for the Imperative are given combined with the Tense and Mood Sign, where it occurs.

169 The Perfect Indicative Active is formed as follows :

	Singular	Plural
First Person	-ī	-imus
Second Person	-istī	-istis
Third Person	-it	-ērunt, -ēre

THE FOUR REGULAR CONJUGATIONS

170 The four Conjugations are known apart by the first vowel in the ending of the Present Infinitive Active.

	Infinitive Ending	Examples
First Conjugation, in ā	-āre	amāre , to love
Second Conjugation, in ē	-ēre	monēre , to advise
Third Conjugation, in e	-ere	regere , to rule
Fourth Conjugation, in ī	-īre	audīre , to hear

171 The Principal Parts are single forms chosen to show the three Stems from which all forms of the Verb may be made by adding the proper endings. The Principal Parts are the Present Indicative, Present Infinitive, Perfect Indicative, and Perfect Participle. Thus :

Pres. Ind.	Pres. Inf.	Perf. Ind.	Perf. Part.
amō	amāre	amāvī	amātus
moneō	monēre	monuī	monitus
regō	regere	rēxī	rēctus
audiō	audīre	audīvī	audītus

Notice that the Present Indicative is given merely to show the first form occurring in the Verb—so to speak, the name of the Verb.

The Present Infinitive shows the Present Stem.

The Perfect Indicative shows the Perfect Stem.

The Perfect Participle shows the Participial Stem.

The Present System includes all parts of the Verb formed on the Present Stem, the Perfect System includes all parts formed on the Perfect Stem, and the Participial System all parts formed on the Participial Stem.

SEMI-DEPONENT VERBS

187 Semi-Dependent Verbs have Active forms in the Present System (171) and Passive Forms in the Perfect System, keeping their Active meaning throughout.

audeō	audēre	ausus sum,	dare gaudeō	gaudēre	gāvīsus sum,	rejoice
soleō	solēre	solitus sum,	be wont
fīdō	fīdere	fīsus sum,	trust

PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION

188 The Periphrastic ("roundabout") kind of Conjugation is formed in the Active by adding the verb sum to the Future Active Participle, and in the Passive by adding sum to the Gerundive. Thus amātūrus sum, I am about to love; amandus sum, I am to be loved.

Active.—amātūrus sum, I am about to love

INDICATIVE

Pres.	amātūrus sum	I am about to love
Imp.	amātūrus eram	I was about to love
Fut.	amātūrus erō	I shall be about to love
Perf.	amātūrus fuī	I have been about to love
Plup.	amātūrus fueram	I had been about to love
F. P.	amātūrus fuerō	I shall have been about to love

SUBJUNCTIVE

Pres.	amātūrus sim	I may be about to love
Imp.	amātūrus essem	I should be about to love
Perf.	amātūrus fuerim	I may have been about to love
Plup.	amātūrus fuissem	I should have been about to love

INFINITIVE

Pres.	amātūrus esse	to be about to love
Perf.	amātūrus fuisse	to have been about to love

Passive.—amandus sum, I am to be loved

INDICATIVE

Pres.	amandus sum	I am to be loved, I deserve to be loved
Imp.	amandus eram	I was to be loved, deserved to be loved
Fut.	amandus erō	I shall deserve to be loved

F. P.	amandus fuerō	I shall have deserved to be loved

SUBJUNCTIVE

Pres.	amandus sim	I may deserve to be loved
Imp.	amandus essem	I should deserve to be loved
Perf.	amandus fuerim	I may have deserved to be loved
Plup.	amandus fuisset	I should have deserved to be loved

INFINITIVE

Pres.	amandus esse	to deserve to be loved
Perf.	amandus fuisse	to have deserved to be loved

PECULIAR FORMS IN CONJUGATION

- 189 Perfects in -āvī, -ēvī, -īvī, -ōvī, and kindred forms in the Perfect System, sometimes drop vē, ve, or vi before r or s.

Thus: amāstī = amāvistī dēlēstī = dēlēvistī amārunt = amāvērunt audīstī = audīvistī amārim = amāverim audīsse = audīvisse amāssem = amāvissem nōstī = nōvistī

- 190 Notice the following Imperatives :

dīcō, say, has dīc faciō, make, has fac
dūcō, lead, has dūc ferō, bear, has fer

- 191 In Future and Perfect Infinitives esse is often omitted :
amātūrus (esse), amātus (esse).

- 192 The endings -undus and -undī, instead of -endus and -endī, often occur in the Gerund and Gerundive of the Third and Fourth Conjugations ; as faciundus for faciendus.

CHANGES OF STEM IN REGULAR VERBS

- 193 The four Conjugations regularly form their Principal Parts as follows (see 166, 170, 171) :

I. amō	amāre	amāvī	amātus,	love
II. moneō	monēre	monuī	monitus,	advise (in most verbs)
	dēleō	dēlēre	dēlēvī	dēlētus,	destroy
III. carpō	carpere	carpsī	carptus,	pluck } (in consonant regō	regere	rēxī	rēctus,	rule } stems)
	acuō	acuere	acuī	acūtus,	sharpen (in vowel stems)
IV. audiō	audīre	audīvī	audītus,	hear

- 194 But other changes often occur in the body or in the ending of the Stem in forming the Principal Parts.

1. In forming the Perfect Stem notice the following changes before s :

- (1) b becomes p : scribō, write ; (scrib-sī =) scripsī.
 (2) d or t is lost : rīdeō, laugh ; (rīd-sī =) rīsī.
 mittō, send ; (mitt-sī =) mīsī.
 (3) c or g becomes x : dūcō, lead ; (dūc-sī =) dūxī.
 regō, rule ; (reg-sī =) rēxī.

- 195 2. In forming the Perfect Stem the Present Stem is sometimes

- (1) Reduplicated : currō, run ; cu-currī.
 mordeō, bite ; mo-mordī.
 poscō, demand ; po-poscī.
 (2) Lengthened : agō, do, try ; ēgī.
 edō, eat ; ēdī.
 videō, see ; vīdī.
 veniō, come ; vēnī.
 (3) Left Unchanged : solvō, loose ; solvī.
 vertō, turn ; vertī.

196 3. In forming the Participial Stem notice the following changes before t :

(1) b becomes p : scribō, write ; (scrib-tus =) scriptus.

(2) d or t combine to make s or ss :

videō, see ; (vid-tus =) vīsus.

mittō, send ; (mitt-tus =) missus.

(3) g becomes c : regō, rule ; (reg-tus =) rēctus.

(4) Sometimes an i develops :

moneō, advise ; (mon-tus =) monitus.

197 In forming compound verbs the Stem vowel of simple verbs often changes as follows :

1. The stem vowel e, changing to ē in Perfect Stem, becomes i in Present Stem of compounds :

emō	emere	ēmī	ēemptus,	buy
red-imō	red-imere	red-ēmī	red-ēemptus,	redeem

2. The stem vowel e, remaining e throughout, becomes i in Present and Perfect Stems of compounds :

teneō	tenēre	tenuī	—	hold
re-tineō	re-tinēre	re-tinuī	re-tentus,	retain

3. The stem vowel a, changing to ē in Perfect Stem, becomes i in Present Stem and e in Participial Stem of compounds :

faciō	facere	fēcī	factus,	do
dē-ficiō	dē-ficere	dē-fēcī	dē-fectus,	fail

4. The stem vowel a, remaining a throughout, becomes i in Present and Perfect Stems and e in Participial Stem of compounds :

rapīō	rapere	rapuī	raptus,	seize
ē-ripiō	ē-ripere	ē-ripuī	ē-reptus,	pull out

LIST OF VERBS

198 The regular verbs in each Conjugation are most conveniently arranged in classes according to the various forms in which the Perfect Indicative Active ends. In the following table the leading Perfect form in each Conjugation is given in bold type :

FIRST	SECOND	THIRD			FOURTH
		Consonant	Vowel	In - scō
-vī	-vī	-vī	-vī	(-vī)	-vī
-uī	-uī	-uī	-uī	-uī	-uī
-ī	-ī	-ī	-ī	-ī	-ī
—	-sī	-sī	-sī	(-sī)	-sī

IRREGULAR VERBS

221 The Irregular Verbs are sum, edō, ferō, volō, fīō, eō, queō and their compounds.

For the conjugation of sum see 173. Its compounds are conjugated in the same way, excepting prōsum, profit, and possum, be able. prōsum is a compound of prōd- (old form of prō-) and sum. It keeps the d before e, but loses it elsewhere. Thus prō-sum, prōd-es, prōd-est; prō-sumus, prōd-estis, prō-sunt. possum is a compound of pot-is, able, and sum.

IMPERSONAL VERBS

233 Impersonal Verbs are those which do not take a personal subject, and are therefore translated with it. Thus pluit, it rains, pudet, it shames, accidit, it happens. They are used only in the Third Person Singular and in the Infinitive. Impersonal Verbs include :

1. Verbs referring to the weather :

pluit, it rains	fulget, it lightens
ningit, it snows	tonat, it thunders

2. Verbs of feeling and conduct :

FEELING	CONDUCT
miseret, it causes pity	decet, it is becoming paenitet, it repents	dēdecet, it is unbecoming piget, it grieves	libet, it suits pudet, it shames	licet, it is lawful taedet, it disgusts	oportet, it ought rēfert, it concerns

With Impersonal Verbs of Feeling the person concerned is in the Accusative. Thus pudet mē, it shames me = I am ashamed.

With Impersonal Verbs of Conduct the person concerned is in the Dative. Thus libet mihi, it suits me, oportet tibi, you ought = you must, licet tibi, it is lawful for you = you may.

3. Other verbs sometimes used impersonally, and a few Passive forms, such as :

accidit , it happens	accēdit , it is added placet , it pleases	praestat , it is better curritur it is run = some one runs pūgnātur it is fought = there is fighting āctum est it is done = all is over ventum est it is come = some one has come

THE PARTICLES

234 Adverbs, Conjunctions, Prepositions, and Interjections are called Particles (7, 8, 9). Adverbs change their form by Comparison only (44). Apart from this the Particles are not inflected.

ADVERBS

FORMATION

235 Most Adverbs are derived from Adjectives.

1. Adverbs are formed from Adjectives of the First and Second Declensions by changing the final vowel of the stem to -ē.

ADJECTIVES		ADVERBS
Thus liber (stem libero-), free ,	becomes	liberē , freely
vērus (stem vēro-), true ,	“	vērē , truly

2. Adverbs are formed from Adjectives of the Third Declension by adding -ter to the stem.

ADJECTIVES		ADVERBS
ācer (stem ācri-), sharp ,	becomes	ācriter , sharply fortis (stem forti-), brave ,	“	fortiter , bravely
fēlix (stem fēlici-), happy ,	“	fēliciter , happily
amāns (stem amant-), loving ,	“	amanter , lovingly

Notice that stems in -nt lose the t before -ter.

236 1. Some Adverbs in -ē have also a form in -iter :

hūmānē and hūmāniter, kindly largē and largiter, lavishly

2. Some Adverbs in -ē have also a form in -ō, sometimes with change of meaning :

certē , at least	certō , certainly rārē , thinly	rārō , seldom
vērē , truly	vērō , true but

237 1. Many Adverbs are really Accusative or Ablative forms of Adjectives, Nouns, or Pronouns :

ACCUSATIVE FORMS

trīste, sadly multum, much clam, secretly quam, as quid? why?

ABLATIVE FORMS

modo, only prīmō, at first māgnopere, greatly forte, by chance quā, where

2. Some Adverbs have the ending -tim (-sim) or -im :

statim , at once	passim , everywhere
paulātim , gradually	interim , meanwhile

3. Some Adverbs end in -tus :

antīquitus , of old	rādīcitus , from the roots
-----------------------------------	--

COMPARISON

238 Adverbs follow the comparison of the Adjectives from which they are derived. The endings of Adverbial comparison are :

	POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
1.	-ē or -ter	-ius	-issimē
	altē , loftily	altius	altissimē
	fēliciter , happily	fēlicius	fēlicissimē following the comparison of altus and fēlix (see 120).

2.	-ē or -ter	-ius	-rimē
	liberē, freely	liberius	liberrimē
	ācriter, sharply	ācrius	ācerrimē following the comparison of liber and ācer (see 122).

3.	-e or -ter	-ius	-limē
	facile, easily	facilius	facillimē
	similiter, in like manner	similius	simillimē following the comparison of facilis (see 123).

239 The following are irregular in comparison :

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
bene, well	melius	optimē
male, ill	pējus	pessimē
multum, much	plūs	plūrimum
parum, (too) little	minus	minimē
diū, long	diūtius	diūtissimē
saepe, often	saepius	saepissimē
nēquiter, worthlessly	nēquius	nēquissimē
prope, near	propius	proximē magis, more	māximē, most potius, rather	potissimum, most
		of all prius, formerly	přimum, first

CLASSES

240 Adverbs are divided into the following classes :

1. Adverbs of Manner. This is by far the largest class, including nearly all Adverbs derived from Adjectives ; as vērē, truly, bene, well, facile, easily.

2. Adverbs of Place :

ubi , where	ibi , there	alicubi , somewhere	ūsquam , somewhere
hīc , here	hūc , hither	hinc , hence	hāc , this way
illīc , there	illūc , thither	illinc , thence	illāc , that way

3. Adverbs of Time :

cum , when	tum , then	nunc , just now	tunc , just then
quandō? when?	jam , now, al- ready, soon	umquam , ever	numquam , never

4. Adverbs of Degree :

quam , as much as	tam , so much	quamvīs , however much
quotiēns , as often as	totiēns , so often

5. Adverbs of Question (Interrogative Particles) :

-ne, nōne, num are question marks (280) an, anne, utrum, utrumne, or, whether annōn, necne, or not

6. Adverbs of Assent and Denial :

etiam yes, so	ita , yes, so	quidem , indeed, to be sure
nōn , no, not	haud , hardly, not	minimē , not at all

7. Adverbs of Number (see 132).

PREPOSITIONS

241 Prepositions stand before the cases they govern.

But versus, -ward, and tenus, as far as, are postpositive.

242 These twenty-nine take the Accusative only :

ad , to	ergā , towards	pōne , behind adversus , against	extrā , without	post , after
adversum , towards	īnfrā , below	praeter , except
ante , before	inter , among	prope , near
apud , at, near	intrā , within	propter , on account of
circā , around	jūxtā , near	secundum , according circiter , about	ob , on account of	suprā , above [to circum , around	penes , in the power of	trāns , across cis, citrā , this side	per , through	ultrā , beyond
contrā , opposite to		versus , -ward

243 These ten take the Ablative only :

ā , ab , abs , away from, by	ē , ex , out from, out of
absque , without (apart from)	prae , compared with
cōram , in presence of	prō , for, in behalf of, in front of cum , with	sine , without, -less
dē , down from, concerning	tenus , up to, as far as

244 Before consonants ā or ab, ē or ex may be used. Before a vowel or h always use ab and ex : ab initiō, from the beginning, ex urbe, out from the city, ex hordeō, out of barley. abs is rare.

Sometimes cum is appended to certain Pronouns in the Ablative :

mēcum , with me	vōbīscum , with you
sēcum , with him, with them	quibūscum , with whom

245 These four take the Accusative or Ablative :

in , in, into, against	subter , underneath sub , under	super , above in and sub with the Accusative denote motion to a place ; with the Ablative they denote rest in a place. Thus :

in urbem vēnit	he came into the city
in urbe habitat	he dwells in the city sub mōntem pervēnit	he arrived at the foot of the mountain
sub mōnte	underneath the mountain

246 The Inseparable Prepositions (or Adverbs) are so named because they occur only in compound words. They are :

amb(i)- , around	amb-īre , go around
au- , away	au-fugere , flee away dis- , dī- , asunder	dis-tinēre , hold apart
in- , not, un-	in-imīcus , un-friendly por- , forth	por-rigere , hold forth
red- , re- , back	red-īre , go back, re-turn
sēd- , sē- , apart	sē-cēdere , go apart, se-cede
vē- , not, -less	vē-cors , heart-less

CONJUNCTIONS

247 Conjunctions (joining-words) connect words, phrases, or clauses. They are of two kinds :

I. Coördinate Conjunctions, joining words, phrases, or clauses having the same construction :

sōl et lūna, sun and moon.

senātus populusque, the senate and people.

aut vīvam aut moriar, I shall either live or die.

II. Subordinate Conjunctions, joining a subordinate to a principal clause (see 287) :

sī valēs, bene est, if you are in health, it is well

vēnī ut vidērem, (I came that I might see), I came to see

I. COÖRDINATE CONJUNCTIONS

248 Coördinate Conjunctions are divided into five classes :

1. Copulative (uniting) :

et, -que, atque (ac), and ; etiam, quoque, also et connects expressions of like importance.

-que connects expressions closely combined in meaning. It is regularly appended to the second word (terrā marīque, by land and sea) or to the first word of the second clause (Aquilōnem claudit ēmittitque Notum, he holds the North (wind) and sends forth the South).

atque (ac) connects two expressions, the second of which is more prominent in meaning. ac is used only before consonants.

etiam is like et.

quoque follows its word : tū quoque, and you too!

The following pairs are often used :

et . . . et	both . . . and
neque . . . neque	} neither . . . nor nec . . . nec
cum . . . tum	while . . . at the same time

249 2. Disjunctive (separating) :

aut, vel, -ve, sive, or

The following pairs are often used :

aut . . . aut	either . . . or (exclusive)
vel . . . vel	either . . . or (indifferent)
sive . . . sive	if . . . or if aut Caesar aut nūllus	either Caesar or nobody
vel pācī vel bellō parātus	ready for (either) peace or war

250 3. Adversative (opposing) :

sed, vērūm, autem, at, atquī, but vērūm is stronger than sed.

autem, but, however, is postpositive (follows its word) : haec autem dīcō, but this I say.

at, but, on the contrary ; atquī, but yet.

Also : tamen, however ; cēterum, but still ; vērō, but indeed.

The following pair is often used :

nōn solum . . . sed etiam, not only . . . but also 251 4. Inferential (consequence, result) :

ergō, therefore : cōgitō ergō sum, I think, therefore I am.

igitur, then, is postpositive : quid igitur faciam? what then shall I do?

itaque, and so.

252 5. Causal (reason, explanation) :

nam, namque, enim, etenim, for enim is postpositive : haec enim dīcō, for this I say.

253 The omission of coördinate conjunctions is called Asyndeton.

vēnī, vīdī, vīcī, I came and saw and overcame.

II. SUBORDINATE CONJUNCTIONS

254 Subordinate Conjunctions are divided into eight classes :

1. Final (end or purpose) :

ut, utī, quō, (in order) that nē, quōminus, quīn, that not vēnī ut tē vidērem, (I came that I might see you), I came to see you.

claudī cūriam jubet, nē quis ēgredī possit, he orders the senate-chamber to be closed, that no one may be able to leave.

255 2. Consecutive (completion, result) :

ut, (so) that ut nōn, (so) that not tam longē aberam ut nōn vidērem, I was so far away that I did not see.

256 3. Temporal (time) :

quandō, cum (quom), ubi, when simul, simul ac, simul atque, as soon as dum, dōnec, quoad, quamdiū, while, until, as long as antequam, priusquam, before postquam, after cum vēr appetit, milītēs ex hibernīs movent, when spring approaches, the soldiers move out-of winter-quarters.

dum spīrō, spērō, (as) long as I breathe, I hope.

257 4. Causal (reason, explanation) :

quia, quod, quoniam, quandō, because, inasmuch as cum (quom), since gaudeō quod tē interpellāvī, I am glad (because) I interrupted you.

258 5. Concessive (allowing) :

quamquam, quamvīs, cum, licet, etsī, although quamvīs ingeniō nōn valet, arte valet, although he does not succeed by genius, he succeeds by art.

259 6. Conditional (supposing) :

sī, if ; nisi, nī, if not ; sīn, but if dum, modo, dummodo, if only, provided

sī valēs, bene est, if you are in health, it is well.

ōderint dum metuant, let them hate, provided they fear.

260 7. Comparative (comparing) :

ut, utī, quam, as sīcut, even as ; prout, according as ; velut, just as tamquam, quasi, as if perge ut instituistī, go on as you have begun.

261 8. Interrogative (in questions). These are Adverbs used as Conjunctions (for list see 240) :

quaerō utrum hōc fēceris necne, I ask whether you did this, or not.

INTERJECTIONS

262 Interjections are exclamations of surprise, joy, sorrow, disgust, and calling :

ō, O!

ō tempora, O the times!

euge, beātus es quom clāmās, bravo!
you look fine when you're shouting!

heu, ēheu, alas!

ēheu fugācēs lābuntur annī, alas! the fleeting years glide by.

vae, woe!

vae victīs, woe to the conquered!

apage, molestus nē sīs, get out! don't bother me!

ohē, O there!

ohē jam satis est, O there! that's enough now.

heus, eho, halloo!

heus tibi dīcō, halloo (there)! I'm speak- ing to you.

THE FORMATION OF WORDS

263 Words formed from other words are divided into two classes, Derivatives and Compounds.

1. Derivatives are formed by adding endings called Suffixes to the stems of nouns, adjectives, verbs, or adverbs :

filius (stem fīlio-), son	fīli-olus , little son	fīli-ola , little
audāx (stem audāc-), bold	audāc-ia , boldness	[daughter
regō (stem reg-), rule	rēx (= rēg-s), ruler, king	rēg-num , kingdom

2. Compounds are formed by linking one word or its stem to another.

The word thus prefixed or added modifies the meaning of the other word, which contains the leading idea. Thus in red-eō, go back, the leading idea is contained in eō, go, and is modified in meaning by red-, back.

I. DERIVATIVES

A. NOUNS

264 Nouns from Nouns.

1. Diminutives in

-ulus	-ula	-ulum
-olus	-ola	-olum
-culus	-cula	-culum
-ellus	-ella	-ellum
-illus	-illa	-illum

rīv-ulus , rivulet (rīvus , stream)	fīōs-culus , floweret (fīōs , flower)

THIRD PART: SENTENCES

I. THE SENTENCE IN GENERAL

277 A Sentence is a thought expressed in words. Every Sentence must contain a Subject and a Predicate. The Subject is that which is spoken of; the Predicate is that which is said about the Subject. Thus in the sentence Caesar pervēnit, Caesar arrived, Caesar is the Subject and pervēnit is the Predicate. In errāre hūmānum est, to-err is human, errāre is the Subject and hūmānum est is the Predicate.

278 The Finite Verb (157) always contains a Subject and a Predicate. It alone can make a complete Sentence. Thus ama-t, he loves. Every Sentence must contain a Verb (155), either expressed or understood. In the following the Verb is not expressed, but is understood :

nēmō malus | fēlix, no bad man (is) happy
omne vīvum | ex ōvō, every living-thing (comes) from the egg

WAYS OF STATING THE SENTENCE

279 A sentence may be expressed in four ways—

1. Declarative—as a fact :

Caesar Galliam vīcit, Caesar conquered Gaul.

2. Interrogative—as a question :

quis Galliam vīcit, who conquered Gaul?

3. Imperative—as a command :

Galliam vince, conquer Gaul!

4. Exclamatory—as an exclamation :

quot gentēs Caesar vīcit, how many tribes Caesar conquered!

DIRECT QUESTIONS¹

280 Interrogative Sentences (Direct Questions) are divided into—

1. Word-Questions, introduced by interrogative pronouns and adverbs :

quem vidēs, whom do you see? quō vādīs, whither goest thou?

2. Sentence-Questions, introduced by -ne, nōnne, num :

vidēsne, do you see? (answer may be yes or no) nōnne vidēs, don't you see? (expects answer yes)

num vidēs, you don't see? (expects answer no)

Sometimes the Sentence-Question omits the introductory particle : videō, do I see?

281 Direct Double Questions are introduced by utrum . . . an (anne) -ne . . . an (anne)

— . . . an (anne) -ne . . . annōn

ēloquar an sileam, shall I speak or keep silent?

utrum honestum est an turpe, is it honorable or base?

tūne hōc fēcistī annōn, did you do this, or not?

¹ For Indirect Questions see 590.

282 The Answer to a question is expressed as follows :

1. Yes—by repeating the verb, or by ita, certē, etiam, s̄anē, sc̄ilicet, v̄erō :

ven̄isne, are you coming? veniō, yes, or ita, yes.

2. No—by repeating the verb with a negative, or by nōn, nōn ita, minimē :

ven̄isne, are you coming? nōn veniō, no, or nōn, no.

283 Questions which have the force of asserting something opposite to the question asked are called Rhetorical Questions :

quis hōc crēdat, who would believe this? (nobody).

quis dūbitat, who doubts? (nobody).

KINDS OF SENTENCES

284 A Simple Sentence contains but one Subject and one Predicate.

A Compound Sentence contains more than one Subject or Predicate.

Simple Sentence : ego tē amō, I love you.

Compound Sentences :

tū mē amās, ego tē amō, you love me, I love you.

dīvide et imperā, divide and conquer.

285 Sentences containing more than one Subject or Predicate treated as a single Subject or Predicate are sometimes explained as Simple Sentences and sometimes as shortened Compound Sentences :

pater et māter mortuī sunt, father-and-mother are dead.

pater vīvit atque valet, father is-alive-and-well.

Every Compound Sentence is made up of two or more sentences called Clauses.

286 The Clauses of a Compound Sentence are called Coördinate when they are parallel independent sentences. Thus sōl ruit et montēs umbrantur, the sun descends and the mountains are shadowed, consists of two independent sentences, sōl ruit and montēs umbrantur.

- 287 A Clause which is governed by another is called dependent or Subordinate. Thus in cum sōl ruit, montēs umbrantur, when the sun descends, the mountains are shadowed, cum sōl ruit is a Subordinate Clause stating the Time of montēs umbrantur, the leading or Principal Clause.

HOW WORDS ARE COMBINED IN SENTENCES

- 288 Words are combined in five ways. Each word either—

1. Agrees With,
2. Governs,
3. Depends On (or Is Governed By),
4. Introduces, or
5. Connects some other word or words.

1. Agreement. In vir māgnus, a great man, the adjective māgnus agrees with the noun vir in Gender (masculine), Number (singular), and Case (nominative).

2. Government. In montem videō, I see the mountain, the verb videō governs montem.

3. Dependence. In montem videō, I see the mountain, the noun montem is governed in the Accusative Case by the verb videō.

4. Introduction. In sī venīs, if you come, the conjunction sī introduces the verb venīs.

5. Connection. In pater et māter, father and mother, the conjunction et connects the nouns pater and māter.

IMPORTANT RULES FOR COMBINING WORDS

289 The following rules are so important that they should be learned at the start:

I. The Subject of a Finite Verb is in the Nominative :

hōra vēnit, the hour has come.

The Subject must be a noun or a substitute for a noun—for example, a pronoun, an infinitive, or a clause :

quis scrībit, who writes?

errāre hūmānum est, to-err is human.

accidit ut esset lūna plēna, (it) happened that-it-was-full-moon.

The Subject is always implied in the personal ending of the verb :

ama-t, he loves, amā-mus, we love.

290 II. A Predicate Noun agrees with its Subject in Case.

A Predicate Noun is one which explains another noun referring to the same thing, and is connected with it by some verb of Being, Seeming, Becoming, or the like :

Rōmulus rēx fuit, Romulus was king.

Cicerō factus est cōnsul, Cicero became consul.

rēgīna colōrum lūx est, light is the queen of colors.

The Predicate Nouns above are rēx, cōnsul, rēgīna.

When possible, a Predicate Noun agrees with its Subject in Gender :

Masculine: ūsus magister est, experience is a teacher.

Feminine: vīta magistra est, life is a teacher.

291 III. An Appositive (Noun) agrees with its Subject in Case.

An Appositive is a noun which explains another noun referring to the same thing, and is joined to it without any connecting word:

urbs Rōma, the city Rome.

flūmen Rhēnus, the river Rhine.

Vergilius poēta, Virgil the poet.

292 1. When possible, the Appositive agrees with its Subject in Gender and Number:

Ōrion vēnātor, Orion the hunter.

voluptās adsentātrīx, pleasure the flatterer.

But, Tullia, dēliciae meae, Tullia, my darling.

2. Partitive Apposition:

Caesar et Bibulus cōsulēs, Caesar and Bibulus, the consuls.

Here cōsulēs is in Apposition with Caesar and Bibulus separately or Partitively.

3. A common noun in Apposition with a Locative (55) is put in the Ablative:

Antiochīae, celebrī urbe, at Antioch, a famous city.

293 IV. An Adjective agrees with its Noun in Gender, Number, and Case.

Like Adjectives in Agreement are Pronouns and Participles.

servus bonus, a good slave dī māgnī, the great gods bona fidēs, good faith duae partēs, two parts oleum bonum, good oil tria verba, three words

illa mulier, that woman sōl oriēns, the rising sun

- 294 1. With two or more Nouns the Adjective is usually in the Plural Number, but sometimes agrees with the nearest:

Nīsus et Euryalus primī, Nisus and Euryalus first.
pater meus et māter, my father and mother.

2. With a Collective Noun (singular in form and plural in meaning) the Adjective may be of the Number and Gender which suit the meaning of the Noun:

pars certāre parātī, part ready to fight.

pars melior, the better part.

mille captī sunt, a thousand (men) are captured.

3. A Neuter Adjective is sometimes used to bring out better the sense intended:

mors est extrēmum, death is the last (thing).

- 295 With two or more Nouns in different Genders—

1. An Attributive Adjective usually agrees with one noun:

cūncta maria terraeque, all seas and lands.

2. A Predicate Adjective is Masculine when the nouns denote persons, and Neuter when the nouns denote things:

pater et māter mortuī sunt, father and mother are dead.

ira et odium turpia sunt, anger and hatred are base.

When the nouns include both persons and things, the Adjective may be Masculine or Neuter:

rēx rēgiaque classis ūnā profectī, the king and the royal fleet set sail together.

nātūrā inimīca sunt libera cīvītās et rēx, hostile by nature are a free state and a king.

NOTE.—An Attributive Adjective is one which modifies its Subject directly: vīta brevis, a short life. A Predicate Adjective is one which modifies its Subject by the help of a Verb to which it is joined: vīta brevis est, life is short, ars est longa, art is long.

296 V. A Finite Verb agrees with its Subject in Number and Person :

tempus fugit, time flies (singular number, third person).
nōs dēsumus, we fail (plural number, first person).

With One Subject

297 1. Sometimes the Verb is Plural when its Subject in the Singular is used in a plural sense :

multitūdō abeunt, the multitude depart.
uterque eōrum exercitum ēducunt, they each lead forth (their) army.

2. When the Predicate Noun (290) stands nearer than the Subject to the Verb, the Verb agrees with the Predicate Noun :
puerī Trōjānum dīcitur agmen, the boys are called the Trojan band.

3. Sometimes the Verb agrees with the Appositive (291) instead of the Subject :

Corinthus, tōtīus Graeciae lūmen, exstīnctum est, Corinth, the light of all Greece, is put out.

4. The participial forms (167: 3) of the Verb agree with the Subject in Gender, Number, and Person :

dēlenda est Karthāgō, Carthage must be destroyed.

With More Than One Subject

298 1. With two or more Subjects the Verb may agree in Number with one or all of them :

ego et Cicerō valēmus, Cicero and I are well.
et castra et legiōnēs et imperātor in periculō versātur, camp, legions, and commander are involved in peril.

2. With subjects of different Person the Verb agrees with the first person rather than the second or third, and with the second rather than the third :

ego et tū valēmus, you and I are well.
ego et Tullia valēmus, Tullia and I are well.
tū et Tullia valētis, you and Tullia are well.

3. With Subjects of different Gender participial forms (167. 3) of the Verb follow the rule for Predicate Adjectives (295. 2).

299 VI. The Relative Pronoun (147) agrees with its Antecedent in Gender and Number, but its Case depends on the construction of the clause in which it stands.

The Antecedent is the word to which the Relative Pronoun refers :

is minimō eget, quī minimum cupit, he needs least, who wants least.

liber, quem legis, meus est, the book (which) you are reading is mine.

flūmen, quod in Rhodanum influit, a river which empties into the Rhone.

300 When there is more than one Antecedent the Relative follows the rule for Predicate Adjectives (295. 2):

pater et filius, quī sunt mortuī, father and son, who are dead.

pater et māter, quī sunt mortuī, father and mother, who are dead.

dīvitiae et honōrēs, quae sunt cadūca, riches and honors, which are perishable (things).

Variations in Agreement

301 1. The Relative usually agrees with an Appositive (291) or a Predicate Noun (290), rather than with its Antecedent:

flūmen Ōxus, quī semper turbidus est, the river Oxus, which is always muddy.

Here quī agrees with the masculine Appositive Ōxus, and not with flūmen, the neuter Antecedent.

Thēbae, quod est caput Boeōtiae, Thebes, which is the capital of Boeotia.

Here quod agrees with the neuter singular Predicate

Noun caput, and not with Thēbae, the feminine plural Antecedent:

2. The Relative sometimes agrees with the sense rather than with the form of the Antecedent:

equitātum praemittit, quī videant, he sends forth cavalry to see (literally, who may see).

Here quī is plural, agreeing with the plural sense rather than with the singular form of equitātum.

Attraction of the Relative

302 1. The Relative is sometimes attracted into the case of its Antecedent:

nātus eō patre quō dixī, born of the father that I said.

Instead of quem dixī.

2. In poetry the Antecedent is sometimes attracted into the case of the Relative (Inverse Attraction):

urbem quam statuō, vestra est, the city (which) I build is yours.

Instead of the regular urbs, quam statuō, vestra est.

The Antecedent

303 1. The Antecedent is sometimes omitted:

quod scripsī, scripsī, what I have written, I have written.

2. The Antecedent is sometimes repeated in the Relative clause:

erant itinera duo, quibus itineribus exīre possent, there were two routes by which (routes) they could go out.

3. The Antecedent is often placed in the Relative clause:

Amānus, quī mōns erat hostium plēnus, Amanus, a mountain which was full of enemies.

Instead of mōns Amānus, quī erat.

quam quisque nōvit artem, in hāc sē exerceat, what trade each one understands, (in) that let him practise (himself).

304 1. The Relative is never omitted, as it is in English :

idem sum quī semper fuī, I am the same I always was.

2. The Relative is often used with the force of a Demonstrative (141), especially at the beginning of a sentence :

quae cum ita sint, since these things are so, since this is so.

quae quī audiēbant, (those) who heard this.

quō cōgnitō, this (being) known, when this was known.

When the Relative refers to a whole sentence as its Antecedent, quod or quae rēs is used :

sapientēs sōlī, quod est proprium dīvitiārum, contentī sunt rēbus suīs, the wise alone are content with their own, which is the true mark of riches.

multae cīvitatēs dēfēcērunt; quae rēs multōrum bellōrum causa fuit, many states revolted; a thing that was the cause of many wars.

In the same way id quod is used in clauses containing incidental or passing statements (by the way) :

sī ā vōbīs dēserar, id quod nōn spērō, tamen nōn dēficiam, if I am to be deserted by you, a thing (by the way) I do not expect, still I shall not fail.

Here id is in apposition with the clause sī ā vōbīs dēserar, which is used as Antecedent.

II. THE USES OF NOUNS

305 The various uses of the six Cases (55) make up the Syntax of the Noun. The Cases are best studied in the following order :

- | | |
|---------------|-------------------------|
| 1. Nominative | Used as Subject |
| 2. Vocative | Used in Direct Address |
| 3. Accusative | Used as Direct Object |
| 4. Dative | Used as Indirect Object |
| 5. Genitive | Used like an Adjective |
| 6. Ablative | Used like an Adverb |

NOMINATIVE

- 306 The Nominative is used, as already explained,
1. As the Subject of a Finite Verb (289).
 2. As a Predicate Noun (290).
 3. As an Appositive (291, 292).

VOCATIVE

- 307 The Vocative is regularly the Case of Direct Address, with or without an Interjection :

ō dī immortālēs, O immortal gods!

audī, fili mī, hear, my son!

But the Nominative is sometimes used in a similar way: ✓

ō festus diēs, O happy day!

audī tū, populus Albānus, hear, Alban people!

ACCUSATIVE

1. THE DIRECT OBJECT

- 308 The Direct Object of an Active Transitive Verb is in the Accusative.

Verbs which take a Direct Object are called Transitive (passing-over), because the action of such Verbs passes over to or ends on an object.

The Direct Object is usually the Person or Thing on which the Verb acts directly (Object Affected), but is sometimes the Result Produced by the action (Object Effected) :

Rōmulus Remum interfēcit, Romulus killed Remus.
Here Remum is the Object Affected.

Rōmulus Rōmam condidit, Romulus founded Rome.
Here Rōmam is the Object Effected.

✓ 309 Intransitive verbs of Feeling are often used transitively :
meum cāsum doleō, I grieve-at my misfortune.

✓ 310 Also verbs of Tasting and Smelling :

piscis mare sapit, the fish smacks-of the sea.

311 Many intransitive verbs of Motion become transitive when compounded with prepositions.

These include all compounded with circum, per, praeter, subter, trāns; many with ad, in, super; and some with ante, con, inter, ob, sub :

Mutina circumsedent, they besiege (sit-around) Mutina.
agrum percurrit, he overruns (runs-through) the territory.

flūmen trānsiit, he went-across the river.

subīre perīculum, to under-go danger.

312 Many verbs, commonly intransitive, take as the Object a neuter pronoun or adjective :

id gaudeō, I am glad-of that.

idem glōrior, I make the same boast.

utrumque dolet, he is grieved-at both.

multa taceō, I keep-silent-about many (things).

313 Some intransitive verbs take as an Object a noun of kindred meaning (Cognate Accusative) :

vītam beātam vīvere, to live a happy life.

mīrum somnium somniāvī, I dreamed a wondrous dream.

✓ 314 Many Impersonal verbs (233) take an Accusative of the Person as Object :

puDET tē, you are ashamed (it shames you).

nisi mē fallit, unless I am mistaken.

315 A few verbs in the Passive voice are used in a reflexive sense, and thus take an Accusative as Object :

galeam induitur, he puts on his helmet (literally, he puts-on-himself his helmet).

- ✓ 316 The Accusative is sometimes used as an Adverb :

māximam partem lacte vīvunt, they live on milk for the most part.

The following are in common use :

multum, much

nihil, not at all māximam partem, for the most part nōn nihil, somewhat plūrimum, very greatly aliquid, somewhat plērumque, usually quid, why? (for what?)

2. TWO ACCUSATIVES—SAME PERSON OR THING ✓

- 317 Verbs of Making, Choosing, Calling, Showing, and the like, may take two Accusatives, one the Direct Object and the other a Predicate Noun or Adjective :

Caesarem certiōrem fēcērunt, they informed Caesar (literally, made Caesar more-certain).

mē cēpēre arbitrum, they took me (as) umpire.

urbem Rōmam vocāvit, he called the city Rome.

In the Passive both the Object and Predicate become nominatives :

Caesar certior factus est, Caesar was informed.

urbs Rōma vocāta est, the city was called Rome.

3. TWO ACCUSATIVES—PERSON AND THING ✓

- 318 Some verbs of Asking, Demanding, Teaching, and Concealing take two Accusatives, one of the Person and the other of the Thing :

Catōnem sententiam rogāvit, he asked Cato (his) opinion.

quis tē litterās docuit, who taught you (your) letters?

nōn tē cēlāvī sermōnem, I did not conceal the conversation (from) you.

In the Passive the Accusative of the Person becomes a nominative, and the Accusative of the Thing remains accusative :

Catō sententiam rogātus est, Cato was asked (his) opinion.

✓319 Instead of the Accusative of the Person the Ablative with ab or dē is used with some verbs of Asking :

pācem ab Rōmānīs petunt, they seek peace from the Romans.

320 Some compounds of trāns take two accusatives :

militēs flūmen trādūxit, he led the soldiers across the river.

✓ 4. ACCUSATIVE OF PART AFFECTED (GREEK ACCUSATIVE)

321 This accusative is used chiefly in poetry and with reference to some part of the human body. It is sometimes called the Accusative of Specification :

mīles frāctus mēmbra, a soldier shattered (in his) limbs.
tremis ossa pavōre, you shiver (in your) bones from fear.

It occurs with Adjectives, as well as Verbs :

nūda genū, bared (to) the knee.

ōs deō similis, like a god (in) countenance.

5. AS SUBJECT OF THE INFINITIVE

322 The Subject of the Infinitive is in the Accusative :

Caesarem adesse nūntiat, he announces that Caesar is present.

6. IN EXCLAMATIONS

✓ 323 The Accusative is used in Exclamations :

mē miserum, wretched me!

ēn quattuor ārās, lo! four altars!

7. TIME AND SPACE

✓ 324 Duration of Time and Extent of Space are expressed by the Accusative :

decem annōs nātus, ten years old (born ten years).
sex mīlia passuum prōcēdit, he advances six miles.

Duration of Time is sometimes expressed by the Accusative with per :

per tōtum diem, (throughout) the whole day.

8. LIMIT OF MOTION

✓ 325 The Aim or Limit of Motion is expressed by the Accusative.

1. Generally with ad or in :

ad Genāvam pervēnit, he arrived at (near) Geneva.
Hannibal exercitum in Ītaliā dūxit, Hannibal led his army into Italy.

2. But without a Preposition are—

Frequently the Names of Towns, Little Islands, and Peninsulas :

Rōmam proficīscitur, he sets out for Rome.
cōnfūgit Dēlum, she fled to Delos.
Chersonēsum pervēnit, he arrived at the Chersonesus.

And always domum, home, rūs, the country, forās, out-doors :

domum redī, go back home!
rūs ibō, I shall go to the country.
effūgī forās, I fled out-doors.

DATIVE

I. THE INDIRECT OBJECT

326 The Indirect Object is in the Dative.

The Indirect Object is that to which anything is done :

hōc tibi dīcō, I tell you this.

327 This use of the Dative occurs—

1. With transitive verbs along with the Direct Object :

dō tibi librum, I give you a book.

sēsē fugae mandāvērunt, they betook themselves to flight.

pecūniae pudōrem antepōnit, he prefers honor to money (places honor before money).

328 Some verbs admit two constructions.

Dative and Accusative :

urbī mūrōs circumdat, he puts walls around the city.

Accusative and Ablative :

urbem mūrīs circumdat, he surrounds the city with walls.

329 Like the Indirect Object is the Dative used in poetry to express the Direction of Motion :

it clāmor caelō, the shout goes up to heaven.

330 2. With many intransitive verbs meaning

Favor, Please, Trust, Assist (and their opposites), Command, Obey, Serve, Resist,

Threaten, Pardon, Spare, Persuade ; and the like :

quae vīdī, mihi placent, what I have seen pleases me.

huic legiōnī Caesar cōfidēbat māximē, Caesar trusted this legion most.

bonīs nocet quī malīs parcit, he harms the good who spares the bad.

crēde mihi, believe me!

sīc mihi persuāsī, so I have persuaded myself.

331 In the Passive such verbs are used impersonally only, and retain the Dative :

mihi persuādētur, I am being persuaded (it is persuaded to me).

nūllī parcitur, none is spared (it is spared to no one).

✓ 332 3. With many verbs compounded with ad, ante, con,

in, inter, ob,
post, prae, prō,
sub, and super.

adfuit hīs pūgnīs, he was present at these battles.

parva māgnīs cōferre, to compare small (things) with great.

pontō nox incubat ātra, black night broods on the deep.

333 4. With many Adjectives and a few Nouns and Adverbs.

These include Adjectives meaning

Useful, Pleasant, Friendly, Fit, Like, Equal, Near, and Dear,

with others of like or opposite meaning :

mihī amīcīssīmus, most friendly to me.

canis similis lupō est, a dog is like a wolf.

sunt proximī Germānīs, they are next to the Germans.

The Nouns and Adverbs thus used are derived from words which govern the Dative :

obtemperātiō lēgībūs, obedience to the laws.

convenienter nātūra e vīvere, to live agreeably to nature.

II. DATIVE OF PERSON OR THING CONCERNED

334 This Dative expresses that for or with regard to which anything is or is done. It includes the following different uses :

335 1. Dative of Reference, denoting the object interested or referred to :

mīlitībūs spēm minuit, as for the soldiers, it lessened their hopes.

nōn scholae sed vītae discimus, we are learning, not for school, but for life.

erit ille mihi semper deus, to me (in my eyes) he will ever be a god.

- 336 The personal pronouns are sometimes used in a similar way to give a light touch of special reference (Ethical Dative):

at tibi repente vēnit Canīnius, but, (mark) you! all at once in came Caninius.

quid sibi vult? what does he mean? (wish so far as concerns himself).

- 337 Here belongs the Dative used with verbs of Separation,—compounds of ab, dē, ex:

sōlstitium pecorī dēfendite, keep the hot sun from the flock.

silicī scintillam excūdit, he struck a spark from the flint.

- 338 Also Dative of the Supposed Standpoint,—always a participle:

Gomphī est oppidum primum Thessaliae venientibus ab Epīrō, Gomphi is the first town of Thessaly as you come (to those coming) from Epirus.

- 339 2. Dative of the Agent, denoting the person acting.

This is used with the Gerundive and compound tenses of the Passive Voice:

ratio nōbīs reddenda est, we must give an account (as for us, our account must be given).

mihi cōsilium captum est, my plan is formed (as for me, my plan is formed).

- 340 3. Dative of the Possessor.

This is used with the verb esse. Here est mihi means I have.

est mihi liber, I have a book.

sunt tibi librī, you have books.

With nōmen est the name may be Nominative or Dative:
fōns cui nōmen Arethūsa est, a fount whose name is Arethusa.

nōmen Arctūrō est mihi, my name is Arcturus.

III. PREDICATE DATIVE

341 The Predicate Dative is of two kinds, the Dative of Tendency and the Dative of Purpose.

342 1. Dative of Tendency, denoting what a thing tends to be.

This is used with verbs of Being and Considering:

est cūrae, it is (for) a care.

vitiō dūcere, to count it (as) a fault.

343 2. Dative of Purpose, denoting what a thing is meant to be:

colloquiō diem dīcunt, they name a day for the interview.

receptuī canere, to sound (for) a retreat.

344 Adjectives meaning Useful or Suitable are used with a Dative which is like the Dative of Purpose:

castrīs locus idōneus, a place fit for a camp.

345 A Predicate Dative often occurs along with the Dative of Reference (335):

cui bonō est? to whom is it (any) good?

hōc mihi nēmō vitiō dūcat, may no one count this against me as a fault.

GENITIVE

346 The Genitive, or Adjective Case, defines or explains the word it modifies. It is used chiefly with nouns, adjectives, or verbs, and is usually to be translated by the preposition of. The Genitive is used in three ways—as an Attribute, a Predicate, and an Object-Case with Verbs.

I. ATTRIBUTIVE GENITIVE

347 The Attributive Genitive is used chiefly with nouns and adjectives. It adds to or explains more precisely the meaning of the word it modifies. It includes the following uses :

348 1. Genitive of Exact Definition, expressing the particular sense to which the modified word is limited :

diēs profectiōnis, day of departure.
nōmen amīcitiae, the name "friendship."
prīdiē ējus diēi, on the day before that day.
cōpiae peditātūs equitātūsque, forces of infantry and cavalry.

(Origin) Mārci filius, the son of Marcus.

(Material) pondus aurī, a mass of gold.

349 This Genitive also occurs before causā, by reason of, and grātiā, for the sake of :

ējus causā, on his account.

exemplī grātiā, for the sake of example.

350 2. Subjective Genitive, denoting the subject of the action implied in the modified word :

amor patris, a father's love.

illud Platōnis, that (saying) of Plato.

351 3. Objective Genitive, denoting the object of the action implied in the modified word :

amor patriae, love of country.

352 Many adjectives and participles take the Objective Genitive :
immemor beneficii, forgetful of a kindness.
avidus glōriæ, eager for glory.
amantēs patriæ, lovers of (their) country.

353 4. Possessive Genitive, denoting possession or ownership :

domus Cicerōnis, Cicero's house.

354 5. Genitive of Quality, denoting the kind or quality of the modified word. Used along with an Adjective :

vir māgnæ auctōritātis, a man of great influence.

flōrēs mille colōrum, flowers of a thousand hues.

puer novem annōrum, a boy of nine years.

fossa quīndecim pedum, a trench fifteen feet (wide).

Under this are included the Genitives of Number, Measure, Time, and Space.

For the Ablative of Quality see 394.

355 6. Genitive of the Whole, denoting the whole of which the modified word is a part.

It is also called the Partitive Genitive. It occurs

356 (1) With nouns, adjectives (in comparative and superlative), pronouns, and numerals (130) :

pars equitātūs, part of the cavalry.

mille passuum, a thousand paces, a mile.

minor frātrum, the younger of the brothers.

ultimus Rōmānōrum, the last of the Romans.

primus omnium, the first of all.

quis vestrum, who of you?

357 (2) With the Neuter Singular of some adjectives and pronouns, and the adverbs satis and parum :

reliquum vītae, the rest of life.

quid cōnsiliī, what plan?

satis ēloquentiae, sapientiae parum, eloquence enough, (but) little sense.

358 (3) Occasionally with adverbs of Place :

eō locī, at that point (literally, there of the place).

ubi terrārum, where in the world?

II. PREDICATE GENITIVE

359 A Genitive used with a verb to assert something of the modified word is called a Predicate Genitive. Thus :

domus est Cicerōnis, the house is Cicero's.

360 The Possessive Genitive (353), Genitive of Quality (354), and Genitive of the Whole (355) are sometimes used as Predicate Genitives :

domus est Cicerōnis, the house is Cicero's.

fossa quīndecim pedum est facta, the trench was made fifteen feet (wide).

quid suī cōnsiliī sit, ostendit, he shows what his plan is.

361 The Genitive of Indefinite Price or Value is used with verbs of Valuing :

quantī est, how much is it?

tantī aestimātur, it is valued at so much.

parvī dūcō, I think it worth (but) little.

362 The verbs most used are esse, be (worth), dūcere, think (it worth), facere, account (it worth), putāre, suppose (it worth), habēri, be held, and aestimāre, value.

The genitives most used are the neuter adjectives tantī, quantī,

māgnī, plūris, plūrimī,

parvī, minōris, minimī.

363 tantī, quantī, plūris, minōris, are also used with verbs of Buying and Selling :

quantī aedēs vēdis, for how much are you selling your house?

For the Ablative of Price see 395.

III. OBJECTIVE GENITIVE WITH VERBS

364 1. The Genitive is used with verbs of Memory: meminī, I remember, reminīscor, I recall, oblīvīscor, I forget,

(a) With Persons, regularly take the Genitive :

mementō meī, remember me.

reminīscerētur prīstinae virtūtis Helvētiōrum, he should recall the old-time valor of the Helvetians.

oblītus meōrum, forgetting my (friends).

(b) With Things, take the Genitive or Accusative :

cōnsiliōrum meminī, I remember your advice.

oblīvīscī nihil solēs nisi injūriās, you are wont to forget nothing, except insults.

NOTE 1.—With neuter pronouns and adjectives the Accusative is regular :

forsan et haec ōlim meminisse juvābit, perchance some day we shall be glad to remember this too.

NOTE 2.—meminī, meaning recall, takes the Accusative :

Cinnam meminī, I recall Cinna.

365 recordor, I bethink myself, takes the Genitive, but oftener the Accusative :

cōnsiliōrum (or cōnsilia) recordor, I bethink myself of his counsel.

The Impersonal in mentem venit, it comes to mind, takes the Genitive :

Platōnis mihi in mentem venit, Plato comes to my mind.

- 366 Verbs of Reminding take the Genitive of the Thing with an Accusative of the Person :

tē veteris amicitiae admoneō, I remind you of our old friendship.

- 367 2. The Genitive is used with some verbs of Judicial Action.

These include verbs of Accusing, Acquitting, Convicting, and Condemning. They take the Genitive of the Thing charged and an Accusative of the Person :

mē fūrtī insimulat, he falsely-accuses me of theft.

Catilinam mājestātis damnāre, to condemn Catiline for treason.

reum capitis absolvere, to acquit the prisoner of a capital crime (of his head).

But the Penalty is in the Ablative :

reum capite damnāre, to condemn the prisoner to death (with his head).

- 368 3. The Genitive is used with some Impersonal Verbs (233).

- (1) With verbs of Feeling.

These are miseret, paenitet, piget, pudet, taedet.

They take a Genitive of that which causes the feeling, and an Accusative of the person concerned :

nōne tē miseret meī, are you not sorry for me?

mē pudet factī, I am ashamed of what-I-did (the deed).

Sometimes a Neuter or the Infinitive is used instead of the Genitive :

tē hōc pudet, you are ashamed of this.

pudet mē dissentīrī, I am ashamed to disagree.

- 369 (2) With interest and rēfert.

(a) The one concerned is in the Genitive :

reī pūblicae interest, it concerns the state.

In place of the Genitive of the Personal Pronoun the Ablative Singular Feminine of the Possessive Pronoun is used:

meā rēfert, nostrā rēfert.

(b) The cause of concern is the Subject, and is expressed by

A Neuter Pronoun id rēfert meā, that interests me.

An Infinitive meā interest tē valēre, your health concerns me.

A Clause quicquid dixeris meā interest, whatever you say concerns me.

(c) The degree of concern is expressed by An Adverb māgnopere rēfert, it greatly concerns.

nihil interest, it makes no difference.

A Genitive of Value (361) parvī interest, it makes little difference.

370 4. The Genitive is occasionally used with Verbs of Plenty or Want:

egeō cōnsiliī, I need advice.

hōc bellum indiget celeritātis, this war requires speed.

These verbs, except indigeō, usually take the Ablative (375).

371 5. The Genitive is occasionally used with Verbs of Partaking and Acquiring:

potiri rērum, to get control of affairs.

The Ablative of Means is the usual construction (387).

ABLATIVE

372 The Ablative, or Adverbial case, is principally used to modify verbs and adjectives. It contains three different meanings, corresponding to three cases which originally were separate but later were blended in one. The three meanings are as follows :

I. Whence ?

Ablative Proper, translated by from.

II. Wherewith ?

Instrumental, translated by with or by.

III. Where ?

Locative, translated by in or at.

I. THE ABLATIVE PROPER

373 The Ablative Proper includes the

1. Ablative of Separation.
2. Ablative of Source.
3. Ablative of Agent.
4. Ablative of Comparison.

374 1. The Ablative of Separation is used with or without a preposition.

375 (1) Usually without a preposition after verbs and adjectives meaning Relieve, Deprive, Need, Lack :

metū liberātus, freed from fear.

hostēs armīs exuit, he stripped the enemy of their weapons.

egeō cōnsiliō, I need advice (370).

vacuus cūrīs, free from cares.

376 (2) With or without a preposition after verbs meaning Refrain, Keep Off, Remove, Depart :

abstinēre injūriā, to abstain from injury.

ē civitāte pulsus est, he was expelled from the state.

urbe cessit, he withdrew from the city.

377 (3) Usually with a preposition after other verbs of Separation, especially compounds of ab-, dis-, sē-:

Rōma longē abest ab Athēnīs, Rome is far distant from Athens.

Britannī differunt ā Gallīs, the Britons differ from the Gauls.

378 2. The Ablative of Source is used with participles denoting Birth :

Rōmulus deō nātus, Romulus, born of a god.

ēdite rēgibus, O descendant of kings.

With pronouns ex is used: ex mē nātus, my son (literally, sprung from me).

To express remote ancestry ab is used: Belgae sunt ortī ab Germānīs, the Belgians are descended from the Germans.

379 3. The Ablative of the Personal Agent is used with ab after passive verbs :

rēx ab suīs appellātur, he is called king by his own (men).

For the Dative of the Agent see 339.

380 4. The Ablative of Comparison is used after the nominative or accusative of Comparatives :

Cicerōne ēloquentior, more eloquent than Cicero.

381 But Comparatives are commonly used with quam, than. When this occurs, the two things compared are in the same case :

Caesar minor est quam Cicerō, Caesar is younger than Cicero.

When the first of the two things compared is in any other case than the nominative or accusative, quam must be used.

- 382 The neuter comparatives plūs, minus, amplius, longius, are often used adverbially without affecting the case :
plūs septingentī captī, over seven hundred (were) captured.
minus quīnque mīlia, under five miles.

II. THE INSTRUMENTAL ABLATIVE

- 383 The Instrumental Ablative includes the following Ablatives :

1. Cause.	6. Quality.
2. Means.	7. Price.
3. Manner.	8. Specification.
4. Accompaniment.	9. Ablative Absolute.
5. Degree of Difference.

- 384 1. The Ablative is used to denote Cause :

seu irā seu odiō seu superbiā nūllam vocem ēmīsit, whether from anger or hate or pride, he uttered not a word.

Jovis jussū veniō, I come at Jove's command.

- 385 This use is common with verbs of Feeling and Trusting :

maerōre discrucior, I am distracted by reason of grief.

nātūrā locī cōfīdēbant, they trusted in the nature of their position.

- 386 2. The Ablative is used to denote the Means or Instrument :

oculis vidēmus, we see with our eyes.

minimō contentus, content with very little.

- 387 The following uses of the Ablative of Means should be noticed :

(1) With the deponent verbs ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, vescor, and their compounds :

ūtī cōnsiliō, to use advice.

victōriā potīrī, to gain a victory (become master by a victory). See 371.

lacte vescuntur, they live on milk (feed themselves with milk).

- 388 (2) With words of Consisting, Abounding, and Filling :

tōtum montem hominibus complēvit, he filled the whole mountain with men.

- 389 (3) With many other expressions, such as—cōnsiliō nōbīs opus est, we need advice.

quid mē fiet, what will become of me? (be done with me).

proeliō lacessere, to provoke to (by) battle.

- 390 3. The Ablative of Manner is regularly used with the preposition cum :

cum virtūte vīvere, to live virtuously.

But cum may be omitted when there is an adjective agreeing with the ablative noun :

māgnā gravitāte loquī, to speak with much dignity.

- 391 Here may be included the Ablative of Accordance, which is used without cum :

mōre et exemplō, according to custom and precedent.

Also the Ablative of Attendant Circumstance :

Capuam vēnī māximō imbrī, I came to Capua in a very heavy shower.

- 392 4. The Ablative of Accompaniment is regularly used with the preposition cum :

cum omnibus cōpiīs exīre, to depart with all their forces.

In military expressions cum is sometimes omitted :

omnibus cōpiīs contendērunt, they marched with all their forces.

- 393 5. The Ablative of Degree of Difference is used with comparatives and words suggesting comparison :

ūnō pede longior, one foot longer (by one foot).

paulō post, a little afterwards (by a little).

multō mālim, I should much prefer.

- 394 6. The Ablative with an Adjective is used to express Quality :

mille colōribus arcus, a rainbow of a thousand hues.

For the Genitive of Quality see 354.

- 395 7. The Ablative is used to express Definite or Indefinite Price :

aedēs duōbus talentīs ēmit, he bought the house for two talents.

aurō virī vītā vēdidit, she sold her husband's life for gold.

Indefinite Price is often expressed by māgnō, parvō, plūrimō, minimō, or by the Genitive (361-363).

- 396 8. The Ablative of Specification denotes that in respect to which anything is or is done :

virtūte praestāre, to excel in valor.

Gallī linguā differunt, the Gauls differ in language.

māior nātū, older (greater in point of age).

The Ablative with dīgnus and indīgnus belongs here :

fidē dīgnus, worthy of belief.

indīgna relātū, things not worth telling.

- 397 9. A noun or pronoun in the ablative, combined with a participle and used adverbially, is said to be in the Ablative Absolute :

Caesar equitātū praemissō subsequēbātur, sending forward the cavalry, Caesar followed (literally, the cavalry being sent forward).

- 398 Instead of a participle an adjective or noun may be used :

Caesare vivō, Caesar (being) alive, when Caesar was alive, while Caesar lived.

mē invītō, against my wish (with me unwilling).

Rōmulō rēge, Romulus (being) king, when Romulus was king.

- 399 In translating into English, the Ablative Absolute is often best rendered by a clause with an active verb or participle. Thus equitātū praemissō may be translated sending forward the cavalry, when he had sent forward the cavalry.

The Ablative Absolute should always be translated so as to bring out the particular meaning intended. Thus :

datā facultāte if opportunity were given.

dīs invītīs $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{though the gods are unwilling.} \\ \textit{since the gods are unwilling.} \end{array} \right.$

III. THE LOCATIVE ABLATIVE

- 400 The Locative Ablative includes the Ablatives of Place and Time.

- 401 1. The Place Where is expressed by the Ablative with a preposition :

erat in Galliā ulteriōre ūna legiō, there was one legion in farther Gaul.

402 But the following are used without a preposition :

(1) Names of towns and little islands :

Carthāgine, at Carthage. Athēnīs, at Athens.

(2) Expressions of Place containing locus or tōtus :

aliō locō, elsewhere.

tōtā urbe, in the whole city.

(3) forīs, outdoors, rūrī, in the country, terrā marīque, by land and sea.

403 Here may be included the following Locative forms (61, 69):

(1) Names of towns and small islands ; found in the singular of first and second declensions :

Rōmae, at Rome.

Ephesī, at Ephesus.

Rhodī ego nōn fuī, I was not at Rhodes.

(2) domī, at home.

humī, on the ground.

militiae, in war, abroad.

vesperī, at evening.

bellī, in war.

herī, yesterday.

404 2. The Place From Which is expressed by the Ablative with a preposition :

Xerxēs ex Eurōpā in Asiam revertit, Xerxes returned from Europe into Asia.

imber dē caelō dēcidit, a shower falls from the sky.

405 But names of towns and small islands are used without a preposition :

Carthāgine profectus, setting out from Carthage.

Cyprō reversus, returned from Cyprus.

406 3. The Time at Which is expressed by the Ablative without a preposition :

primā lūce, at dawn.

adventū meō, at my departure.

bellīs Pūnicīs, at the time of the Punic wars.

proximīs comitiīs, at the last election.

Sometimes in is used : in tālī tempore, at such a time.

- 407 4. The Time Within Which is expressed by the Ablative with or without a preposition :

quīnque annīs illōs librōs cōnfēcit, he completed those books in five years.

bis in diē, twice a day.

III. THE USES OF ADJECTIVES

- 408 The Agreement of Adjectives has been explained in 293, 294, 295.

- 409 Adjectives are used as Nouns,

1. Often in the Plural :

fortūna fortēs adjuvat, fortune favors the brave.

vae victīs, woe to the vanquished!

parva compōnere māgnīs, to compare small (things) with great.

2. Sometimes in the Singular :

sapiēns dominātur astrīs, the wise (man) rules his stars.

- 410 In the singular the noun is generally expressed when persons are meant :

homo doctus, a scholar.

liber homo, a gentleman.

- 411 Some Adjectives have become Nouns :

amīcus, friend

librārius, bookseller

cōgnātus, kinsman

vīcīnus, neighbor

In such instances the Adjective use has partly or wholly disappeared.

412 Some Adjectives are used like Adverbs :

laetus vĕnī, I came gladly.

invītī discessimus, we departed unwillingly.

413 Ordinal Numerals are more common in Latin than in English :

annō millēsimo, in the year 1000.

quārtus annus est, it is going on four years.

COMPARATIVES AND SUPERLATIVES

414 The Comparative and Superlative include several shades of meaning :

1. Positive.	māgnus	great
2. Comparative.	mājor	somewhat great
		rather great
		more great, greater
		too great
3. Superlative.	māximus	very great
		most great, greatest
4. Superlative	{ vel māximus	very greatest strengthened.

415 With a Comparative, the word compared is either connected by quam or, less often, is put in the Ablative (380, 381) :

virtūs ūtilior est quam scientia, } virtue is more useful virtūs scientiā ūtilior est, } than knowledge.

416 A few Adjectives of Place and Order, mostly Superlatives, are used with a partitive meaning.

They are prīmus, extrēmus; summus, medius, īnīmus (īmus) :

prīmō vĕre, in early spring (literally, in first spring).

extrēmā aestāte, in late summer.

summa arbor, the top of the tree.

in mediā urbe, in the midst of the city.

417 prior, prīmus, postrēmus, ultimus, sometimes have the force of an English clause :

prīmus vēnit, he was-the-first to come (he came the first one).

418 This use of prīmus must not be confused with the meaning of the adverbs prīmum and prīmō :

prīmum vēnit, he came for the first time.

prīmō mē nōn āgnōvit, at first he did not know me.

IV. THE USES OF PRONOUNS

PERSONAL

419 The Personal Pronoun (137) as Subject is usually not expressed, unless it is emphatic :

fēcī, I did it. ego fēcī, it was I who did it.

420 The Genitives meī, tuī, nostrī, vestrī, are usually Objective (351), but nostrum and vestrum are usually Genitives of the Whole (355):

memoria meī tua, your remembrance of me.

REFLEXIVE

421 The Reflexive sē (138) and the Possessive suus (140) are used to refer to the Subject.

1. They usually refer to the Subject of the clause in which they stand :

gladiō sē dēfendit, he defended himself with a sword.

Brūtus amīcum suum occīdit, Brutus slew his own friend.

Helvētiōs in suōs fīnēs revertī jussit, he ordered the Helvetians to return into their own territory.

2. When in a subordinate clause (287) they sometimes refer to the Subject of the principal clause. This is regular in Indirect Discourse (609).

This happens when the main thought of the subordinate clause refers to the subject of the principal clause:

hīs Caesar mandat ut ad sē revertantur, Caesar commands them to return to him.

422 Sometimes two Reflexives in a subordinate infinitive clause refer one to the subject of the principal and one to the subject of the subordinate clause:

Ariovistus respondit nēminem sēcum sine suā perniciē contendisse, Ariovistus answered that no man had contended with him without his own destruction.

Here sēcum refers to Ariovistus, the subject of respondit in the principal clause, and suā to nēminem the subject of the infinitive contendisse in the subordinate clause.

423 suus, especially when combined with quisque, is sometimes used to refer to some other word than the Subject:

Hannibalem suī cīvēs ē cīvitate ējēcērunt, his own fellow-citizens cast out Hannibal.

jūs suum cuique tribuere, to give every one his due.

POSSESSIVE

424 The Possessive Pronoun (139) is usually omitted, unless it is emphatic:

patrem amīsī, I lost (my) father.

But suō locō dīcam, I shall state in the proper place (its own place).

meā sententiā, in my opinion.

A word in apposition with a possessive pronoun is put in the Genitive. ipse, sōlus, ūnus, omnis, are most frequently used in this way:

meā ūnīus operā, by my help alone.

in tuā ipsīus epistolā, in your own letter.

SUBSTITUTES FOR RECIPROCAL PRONOUNS

425 Latin has no Reciprocal Pronoun for each other, one another.

The following expressions are to be used instead :

1. inter nōs, inter vōs, inter sē :

obsidēs inter sē dare, to give each other hostages (among themselves).

inter nōs conjūctī sumus, we are attached to each other.

2. alter, alius or neuter repeated in a different case :

alter alterum amat, the one loves the other.

alius aliī subsidium fert, they give help to one another.

3. A noun repeated in a different case :

apēs apium sunt simillimae, bees are very like each other.

DEMONSTRATIVE

426 In addition to the meanings of hīc, iste, ille, already explained (141), the following should be noticed :

1. hīc refers to what is nearest, ille to what is remote :

hīc diēs, to-day.

haec nox, last night (if spoken in the morning).

ille sōl, yonder sun.

2. hīc and ille in contrast often mean this . . . that, the former . . . the latter :

hōc idem est quod illud, this is the same as that.

haec in nostrā, illa in deōrum manū sunt, the former is in our hand, the latter in the hand of the gods.

3. ille often means well-known, famous :

ille Dēmostenēs, the famous Demosthenes.

illud Platōnis, that noted (saying) of Plato.

4. iste often indicates contempt :

ista impudentia, such impudence!

5. The missing pronoun of the third person is supplied by ille or is (137, 144). is also serves as the regular antecedent of the relative pronoun (299):

is fēcit, he did it.

id, quod praedīxī, ēvēnit, that, which I foretold, has happened.

427 īdem, the same (145), may sometimes be translated by also, likewise:

quidquid honestum, idem ūtile, whatever (is) honorable (is) also expedient.

INTENSIVE

428 The Intensive ipse, self (146), emphasizes the word it modifies:

ipse dīxit, (he) himself said.

nōsce tē ipsum, know thyself.

sapientia ipsa bona, wisdom in itself (is) good.

hōc ipsum, this very thing.

decem diēs ipsī, just ten days.

ipse aderat, he was present in person.

RELATIVE

429 The rules for the Relative quī, who, have been given in 299–304.

INDEFINITE

430 For a list of Indefinite Pronouns see 149.

431 quis, aliquis, quispiam, and quīdam are indefinite in different degrees:

sī quis dīxerit, should any one say. Most indefinite.

aliquis dīxerit, dīxerit quispiam, } some one may say. Less indefinite.

scrīptor quīdam narrat, a certain writer says. Least indefinite.

432 quisquam and the pronominal adjective ūllus mean any one at all. They are used mostly in negative, interrogative and conditional sentences, and after comparatives :

neque mē quisquam āgnōvit, and not a soul recognized me.

an quisquam Croesō dīvitior fuit, was ever any one richer than Croesus?

sī quisquam, ille sapiēns fuit, he was wise, if any one (ever was).

taetrior tyrannus quam quisquam superiōrum, a viler tyrant than any of his predecessors.

hostem esse in Syriā negant ūllum, they say that there is not an enemy in Syria.

433 quisque, each one, is used particularly

1. In relative and demonstrative sentences :

quod cuique obtigit, id quisque teneat, what each one has got, that let him keep.

mēns cūjusque, is est quisque, each one's mind is each one's self.

2. With the reflexives sē and suus (421) :

sē quisque dīligit, each one loves himself.

3. Following superlatives and ūnus :

optimus quisque, all the best (each best one).

ūnus quisque vestrum, every one of you.

4. Following ordinal numerals :

tertiō quōque annō, every third year.

434 The negative of quisquam is nēmō, nobody, and of ūllus is nūllus, no, none. nēmō is always used as a noun and nūllus generally as an adjective :

nēminem videō, I see nobody.

nūlla causa, no reason.

435 The genitive and ablative of nēmō are regularly supplied by nūllīus and nūllō.

nēminem laesit ; nūllīus aurēs violāvit, he has injured nobody ; he has shocked no one's ears.

PRONOMINAL ADJECTIVES

436 The principal Pronominal Adjectives (151) are alius, alter,	ūllus, nūllus,

uter, neuter,	cēterī, reliquī, uterque.

437 alius, another, and alter, the other, have various uses.

1. Singly :

īdem et alius, the same and (yet) another.

alter Nerō, a second Nero.

claudus alterō pede, lame in one foot.

2. In Pairs, meaning each other, one . . . another, some . . . others :

alter alterum amat, each loves the other (Reciprocal use, 425).

aliī aliō modō vīvunt, some live one way, some another.

aliī resistunt, fugiunt aliī, some resist, others flee.

438 Notice the following plurals :

aliī , others	cēterī , all the others	reliquī , the rest, the remaining (ones)
-----------------------------	---------------------------------------	--

439 Also these uses :

uterque , each (of two)	utrīque , both	ambō , both together
---------------------------------------	------------------------------	------------------------------------

V. THE USES OF THE VERB

The Finite Verb

440 The various uses of Voice, Mood, Tense, Person, and Number make up the Syntax of the Finite Verb (156).

441 In finding the place where any form of the finite verb occurs, pick out (1) the Tense first, then (2) the Mood and (3) Voice, and after that (4) the Person and (5) Number.

		1. Tense	2. Mood	3. Voice	4. Person	5. Number amat, he loves	} is	Present	Indicative	Active	Third	Singular
amēmus, let us love		Present	Subjunctive	Active	First	Plural

I. VOICE, PERSON, NUMBER

442 The principal uses of Voice (158), Person (163), and Number (162) have been explained.

VOICE

In addition, the following special uses of Voice should be noticed :

1. The Active Voice of transitive verbs is sometimes used

Absolutely—alone, with no object implied : amat, he is in love, audiō, I am listening.

Reflexively—with or without a reflexive pronoun : terra mōvit (sē), the earth quaked (moved itself).

Both these uses may be considered Intransitive.

2. The Active Voice of intransitive verbs is sometimes used transitively.

Thus rīdeō, I laugh, is usually intransitive, but is transitive in quid rīdēs, what are you laughing at?

3. The Passive Voice sometimes has a reflexive meaning :

ACTIVE	REFLEXIVE	PASSIVE
lavō , I wash	lavor , I bathe (wash myself)	lavor , I am washed

4. Sometimes intransitive verbs have a few Passive forms. These are always used with an impersonal meaning (233. 3): pūgnātum est, there was fighting (literally, it was fought).

II. TENSE

443 Every Tense shows two things :

First, the Progress of the action, either

1. Defined as Going On or Completed, or
2. Undefined.

Second, the Time of the action, as Past, Present, or Future.

Thus in the Imperfect Tense dīcēbam, I was saying, the action of the verb is Defined as Going On in Past Time.

In the Present Tense dīcō, I am saying, the action of the verb is Defined as Going On in Present Time, but whenever dīcō means simply I say, the action of the verb is Undefined in Present Time.

PRINCIPAL AND HISTORICAL TENSES

444 The Principal Tenses include the Present, Present Perfect (160), Future, and Future Perfect.

The Historical Tenses include the Imperfect, Historical Perfect (160), and Pluperfect.

TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE

Present Indicative

445 The Present Indicative states the action of the verb as going on or as undefined in present time.

Going On : dīcō, I am saying quid facis? what are you doing?

Undefined : dīcō, I say bene est, it is well.

446 It is also used

1. For what is generally true or customary :

īra furor brevis est, anger is a brief madness.

Cicerōnis orātiōnēs in scholīs leguntur, Cicero's orations are read in the schools.

2. For attempted action :

perīculum vītant, they are trying to avoid (literally, are avoiding) danger.

3. In citing the statements or opinions of writers (Literary Present) :

Platō disputat animam esse immortālem, Plato argues the soul is immortal.

447 4. To express past or future time as viewed from the present.

(1) Past action in a lively or present manner (Historical Present) :

mīlitēs incēdere jubet, he ordered (literally, orders) the soldiers to advance.

Here belongs the use of dum, while, with the Present Tense :

dum haec geruntur, while these things were (literally, are) being attended to.

(2) Past action continued into the present.

This use occurs in connection with the adverbs jam, now (at last), jam diū, now for a long time, tam diū, so long, jam pridem, now long since, and jam dudum, now at length :

jam videō, now (at last) I see.

tam diū Germānia vincitur, so long is Germany in being conquered.

(3) Future action in advance : sī vivō, if I live.

Imperfect Indicative

448 The Imperfect Indicative states the action of the verb as going on in past time :

librum legēbam, I was reading a book.

ut herī dīcēbam, as I was saying yesterday.

449 It is also used

1. For repeated or customary action :

cōsulēs quotannis creābantur, the consuls were chosen yearly.

2. For action attempted or begun :

eum in exsilium ējiciēbam, I was trying to drive him into exile.

3. Instead of the Present Tense in letters (Epistolary Imperfect) :

cum haec scribēbam, in exspectātiōne erant omnia, as I write this, everything looks hopeful. See 456, 458.

4. For earlier past action continued in the more recent past.

This use occurs with jam, jam diū, and similar adverbs, as it does in the Present Tense (447) :

jam dudum flēbam, long had I been weeping.

5. In descriptions :

oppidum Alesia erat in colle summō, the town (of) Alesia was on the top of a hill.

Future Indicative

450 The Future Indicative states the action of the verb as going on or as undefined in future time:

Going on: scrībam, I shall be writing.

Undefined: scrībam, I shall write.

451 It is sometimes used with an imperative meaning:
tū nihil dīcēs, you will say nothing.

Perfect Indicative

452 The Perfect Indicative has two separate uses:

1. Present Perfect: amāvī, I have loved.

2. Historical Perfect: amāvī, I loved.

1. Present Perfect

453 The Present Perfect states the action of the verb as completed at the present time. It is translated with have:

quod scrīpsī, scrīpsī, what I have written, I have written.

2. Historical Perfect

454 The Historical Perfect states the action of the verb as undefined in past time:

vēnī, vīdī, vīcī, I came and saw and overcame.

455 The Perfect of some inceptive (214) and defective verbs (230) is translated by the Present Tense:

nōvī, I know.

meminī, I remember.

The Pluperfect and Future Perfect of these verbs are to be translated in a simple past and future sense:

nōveram, I knew.

nōverō, I shall know.

456 In letters (449. 3, 458) the Perfect is sometimes used instead of the Present Tense (Epistolary Perfect):

tertiam ad tē hanc epistolam scrīpsī, this (is) the third letter I'm writing you.

Pluperfect Indicative

457 The Pluperfect Indicative states the action of the verb as completed in past time :

fuerat inimicus, he had been (my) enemy.

458 In letters (449. 3, 456) the Pluperfect is sometimes used instead of the Present Perfect (Epistolary Pluperfect) :

ad tuās omnēs epistulās rescripseram, I have replied to all your letters.

Future Perfect Indicative

459 The Future Perfect Indicative states the action of the verb as completed in future time :

dīcam tibi, cum ipse audiverō, I'll tell you, when I hear myself (literally, shall have heard).

460 Table showing the Chief Uses of Tenses of the Indicative

TENSES OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE

I. IN PRINCIPAL CLAUSES

461 In independent sentences and principal clauses (287) the four tenses of the Subjunctive (160) are usually like the same tenses of the Indicative. But notice that

1. The Present Subjunctive regularly has a future meaning:

maneat, may he stay, let him stay.

2. The Imperfect Subjunctive sometimes has a present meaning:

utinam nē haec scriberem, would I were not writing this!

3. The Perfect Subjunctive sometimes has a future meaning:

nē mortem timueris, do not fear death.

II. IN SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

462 In a subordinate clause (287) the tense of the Subjunctive is said to follow the tense of the principal clause. This is called the Sequence of Tenses. The general rule for the Sequence of Tenses is:

Principal Tenses follow Principal ; Historical Tenses follow Historical.

TABLE SHOWING THE SEQUENCE OF TENSES

1. Principal Tenses following Principal

PRIN. CLAUSE	SUB. CLAUSE
dīcō	} quid sentiam	I say	} what I think dīcam		I shall say
dīxī		or I have said
dīxerō		quid sēnsērim I shall have said

2. Historical Tenses following Historical

dīcēbam	} quid sentīrem	I was saying	} what I thought dīxī		or I said
dīxeram		quid sēnsissem I had said

464 Following a Principal Tense:

1. The present Subjunctive expresses the same time as that of the principal clause:

dīcō quid sentiam, I say (now) what I think (now).

dīcam quid sentiam, I shall say (then) what I think (then).

2. The Perfect Subjunctive expresses time earlier than that of the principal clause:

dīcam quid sēnsērim, I shall say (then) what I thought (before that time).

465 Following a Historical Tense:

1. The Imperfect Subjunctive expresses the same time as that of the principal clause:

dīcēbam quid sentīrem, I was saying (then) what I was thinking (then).

2. The Pluperfect Subjunctive expresses time earlier than that of the principal clause:

dīcēbam quid sēnsissem, I was saying (then) what I had thought (before that time).

Apparent Variations in the Sequence of Tenses

- 466 These variations occur mostly because of (1) the frequent historical use of the Perfect, and (2) the construction of certain Conditional Sentences (471).
- 467 1. The Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive commonly follow the Perfect Indicative, since it is generally used as a historical tense—often in instances where it may be translated with have. This is regular in Clauses of Purpose (506):
convocāvī vōs ut pauca dīcerem, I have called you together that I might say a few (words).
- 468 2. The Perfect Subjunctive, although it follows a principal tense, usually refers to past action:
dīcam quid sēnserim, I shall say what I thought.
- 469 3. The Perfect Subjunctive often (and the Present Subjunctive rarely) follows a historical tense in Clauses of Result (519):
ita quiēvit ut eō tempore omnī Neāpolī fuerit, he kept so quiet that he stayed all that time at Naples.
Verrēs Siciliam ita perdidit ut ea restitūi nōn possit, Verres so ruined Sicily that it cannot be restored.
- 470 4. The Historical Present (447) usually behaves as a historical, but sometimes as a principal tense:
ut jānuam clauderent, imperat, he ordered (them) to shut the door.
hortātur ut arma capiant, he exhorted (them) to take up arms.
- 471 5. Conditional Sentences contrary to fact (557) are not governed by the general rule for the Sequence of Tenses (462):
honestum tāle est ut, vel sī ignōrārent id hominēs, tamen laudābile esset, virtue is such (a thing) that, even if men were ignorant of it, it would still be glorious.

Here the Conditional Sentence contrary to fact is sī ignōrārent id hominēs, tamen laudābile esset.

The verbs ignōrārent and esset are in the Imperfect Subjunctive according to the rules for Conditional Sentences (557). They stay in the Imperfect Subjunctive, although they are in a subordinate clause following a principal clause whose verb (est) is in a principal tense.

Future Time in Subordinate Subjunctive Clauses

472 As the Subjunctive has no Future or Future Perfect, the place of these missing tenses is filled by the existing subjunctive tenses—especially after principal clauses which suggest future time.

In this construction either the regular or the periphrastic form (188) may be used. The periphrastic form is to be preferred when future time is to be expressed very definitely.

In Regular Form

To fill the place of the missing Future, the Present is used after principal tenses and the Imperfect after historical tenses:

quaerō quid faciās, I ask what you will do.

quaesivī quid facerēs, I asked what you would do.

To fill the place of the missing Future Perfect, the Perfect is used after principal tenses and the Pluperfect after historical tenses:

quaerō quid fēceris, I ask what you will have done.

quaesivī quid fēcissēs, I asked what you would have done.

In Periphrastic Form

quaerō quid factūrus sīs, I ask what you are going-to-do.

quaesivī quid factūrus essēs, I asked what you were going-to-do.

TENSES OF THE IMPERATIVE

473 As all commands and requests are used of future acts, the two tenses of the Imperative always have a future meaning.

When used together, the Present refers to an imminent and the Future to a later future :

crēde et crēditō, believe this and then believe (if you can).

474 Generally the Present Imperative is used :

valē, fare (thee) well. valēte, fare (ye) well.

475 The Future Imperative is found—

1. In sentences stating an expected result or conclusion :

sī iste ībit, ītō, if that (fellow) goes, you shall go (too).

ubi nihil erit quod scrībās, id ipsum scrībitō, when there is nothing for you to write, (then) you'll write just that.

2. In general formal statements, such as laws, wills, rules, and maxims :

hominem mortuum in urbe nē sepelītō, thou shalt not bury a dead man within the city.

salūs populī suprēma lēx estō, let the welfare of the people be the highest law.

īgnōscitō saepe alterī, numquam tibi, forgive your brother often, yourself never.

III. MOOD

476 Mood (159) is the manner of stating the action of the Verb. The action may be stated—

1. As Really Happening. The Mood of Fact (Indicative).
2. As Thought Of. The Mood of Will, Desire, Possibility (Subjunctive).
3. As Demanded. The Mood of Command (Imperative).

A. IN PRINCIPAL CLAUSES

INDICATIVE MOOD

- 477 The Indicative (159) always expresses the action of the verb as a fact.

The fact may be expressed in three ways:

Asserted: is mē quaerit, he seeks me.

Asked: quis mē quaerit, who seeks me?

Supposed: sī quis mē quaerit, if any one seeks me.

- 478 The Indicative is used mostly in independent sentences or principal clauses. But it also occurs in subordinate clauses which express facts:

nōn is sum quī fuī, I'm not the man I was.

quod scripsī, scripsī, what I have written, I have written.

- 479 The English ought, might (in sense of can or could), and it would be usually become Indicatives with the Present Infinitive:

dēbeō tacēre, I ought to keep silent.

dēbēbam tacēre, I ought to have kept silent.

possum dicere, I might say.

potuī dicere, I might have said.

difficile erat dicere, it would be hard to say.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

480 The Subjunctive (159) in independent sentences or principal clauses expresses the action of the verb, not as a fact, but as thought of in one of three ways:

1. As Willed: Volitive Subjunctive.
2. As Desired: Optative Subjunctive.
3. As Possible: Conditional Subjunctive.

I. Volitive Subjunctive

[Subjunctive of Will]

481 The Volitive Subjunctive states the action as willed. It is used

1. In commanding: Jussive Subjunctive.
2. In conceding: Concessive Subjunctive.

482 1. Jussive Subjunctive, used in commanding, like the Imperative Mood (495):

First Person—only in Plural of Present Tense:

vivāmus atque amēmus, let us live and love.

This is the so-called Hortatory Subjunctive.

Second and Third Persons—generally in Present Tense (492):

cautus sis, you must be careful.

suum quisque nōscat ingenium, let each learn his own disposition.

nōmina declīnāre puerī sciant, let boys know (how) to decline nouns.

483 2. Concessive Subjunctive, used in conceding:

The tenses used are the Present and Perfect:

nē sit summum malum dolor: malum certē est, (grant) pain is not the worst evil: an evil it surely is.

fruātur sānē hōc sōlātiō, that comfort, of course, he may take.

II. Optative Subjunctive

[Subjunctive of Desire]

484 The Optative Subjunctive states the action as a wish or desire.

The tenses used are the Present, Imperfect, and Pluperfect.

The Present states the wish as possible:

dī istaec prohibeant, may the gods avert that!
utinam illum diem videam, may I see that day!

The Imperfect states the wish as unfulfilled in present time:

utinam Cyrus vīveret, O that Cyrus were alive!

The Pluperfect states the wish as unfulfilled in past time:

utinam tacuissem, O that I had kept still!

NOTE: utinam, O that or would that, is often used with the Present, regularly with the Imperfect and Pluperfect, in the optative subjunctive.

III. Conditional (in a few cases Potential) Subjunctive

[Subjunctive of Possibility]

485 This Subjunctive includes the

1. Potential Subjunctive, which states the action as that which can be.

This use is not common. The tense is the Present or the Perfect with a present meaning:

dīcat or dīxerit aliquis, some one may say.

frangās, potius quam corrigās, quae in prāvum indūruērunt, you can break, easier than mend, what has hardened into evil.

The Potential Subjunctive suggests possibility, but possibility of only one kind (what can be), and so it easily disappears in the general

486 2. Conditional Subjunctive, which states the action of the verb as possible in any way—that is, (1) possible (2) on any condition.

487 (1) The possible action is always stated in the principal clause :

hōc dīxissem, I should have said so and so.

488 (2) The condition of its being possible may be

1. Omitted, but understood :

hōc dīxissem, I should have said so and so.

Here some such condition, as sī adfuissem, if I had been there, or sī dīxissem, if I had spoken, is understood, though not stated.

2. Suggested in the principal clause :

pāce tuā dīxerim, by your leave I would say.

Here the condition is suggested in pāce tuā, meaning if I have your leave.

3. Expressed by a subordinate clause :

sī adesset, bene esset, if he were here, it would be well.

Here the condition is expressed by the subordinate clause sī adesset. This is in the regular form of the Conditional Sentence (557).

489 The Conditional Subjunctive in a leading clause is therefore nothing but the conclusion of a Conditional Sentence (551), in which the condition is either omitted, suggested, or expressed.

- 490 The Subjunctive used in polite or cautious statements may be considered a Conditional Subjunctive. This is common with velim, nōlim, mālim (227):

pāce tuā dīxerim, by your leave, I would say.

velim mihi ignōscās, I wish you would forgive me.

vellem mē ad cēnam invitāvissēs, I wish you had asked me to dinner.

vix ausim dīcere, I hardly dare say.

NEGATIVE SUBJUNCTIVE SENTENCES

- 491 The negative word used

I. With the Volitive and Optative Subjunctives is nē :

Volitive :

nē dēspērēmus, let us not despair (Hortatory).

nē audeant, let them not dare (Jussive).

nē sit summum malum, (grant) it is not the worst evil (Concessive).

Optative :

utinam nātus nē essem, would I had not been born!

II. With the Conditional Subjunctive is nōn :

nōn facile dīxerim, I could not easily say.

The Negative Jussive Subjunctive

- 492 A negative command or prohibition in the Second Person of the Subjunctive occurs chiefly in poetry. The Present or (oftener) the Perfect is used :

nē mē attigās, don't touch me.

tū nē fēceris, don't you do (it).

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN RHETORICAL QUESTIONS (283)

- 493 The Subjunctive is found in questions of doubt, disbelief, and disdain. The negative is nōn.

Doubt :

quid agam, what am I to do?

quid agerem, what was I to do?

Disbelief :

quis putet, who would suppose?

cūr nōn liceat, why should it not be allowed?

Disdain—sometimes introduced by ut or utī :

tē ut ūlla rēs frangat, anything break you down?

SUBJUNCTIVE WITH INDEFINITE SECOND PERSON

- 494 The Second Person Singular of the Subjunctive is sometimes used with an indefinite meaning. Here you has the force of one :

memoria minuitur nisi eam exerceās, the memory weakens, unless one exercises it.

vidērēs, one could see.

IMPERATIVE MOOD

- 495 The Imperative (159) states the action of the verb as a command or request.

Any kind of request may be thus expressed :

An Order : ī curre, puer, go, boy! run along!

Exhortation : ōrā et labōrā, work and pray.

Prayer : audī Jūpiter, hear thou, O Jove!

Comic Request : abī, lūdīs mē, go away! you're fooling me.

- 496 Negative commands, or prohibitions (see 492), may be expressed by :

1. nōlī or nōlīte with the Infinitive :

nōlī timēre, fear not.

2. nē with Imperative :

nē cēde malīs, yield not to the ills (of life).

3. Imperatives such as cavē, beware, fac or vidē, see to it, followed by nē with the Subjunctive :

cavē nē eās, (look out,) don't go.

fac nē aliud quid cūrēs, see you attend to nothing else.

B. IN SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

497 The Moods in subordinate clauses are the Indicative and Subjunctive. Generally the Subjunctive is used. The Indicative occurs only in clauses of fact (478).

NOTE: This is the principal use of the Subjunctive, as the name indicates (sub-jūctus, sub-joined, dependent). Its meaning in subordinate clauses is the same as in principal clauses, or is derived from that meaning.

I. USES OF SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

498 A subordinate clause (287) taken as a whole, is construed like a single word. It is used

1. As a Noun (Substantive Clause)—usually as the Subject or Object of the verb in the principal clause :

saepe fit ut hominēs fallantur, it often happens that men are deceived.

Here the Substantive Clause ut hominēs falluntur is the Subject of fit.

imperō tibi ut abeās, I order you to depart.

Here the Substantive Clause ut abeās is the Object of imperō.

499 Substantive Clauses are also used as Appositives (291), and occasionally in other constructions :

hōc praestāmus ferīs, quod colloquimur inter nōs, we are better than the beasts in this, that we can talk with each other (Appositive).

ōrō tē, virum tē praebeās, I pray you, show yourself a man (Accusative of Thing, 505).

500 2. As an Adjective (Attributive Clause) :

pontem, quī erat ad Genāvam, jubet rescindī, he orders the bridge, which was near Geneva, to be cut down.

Here the Clause quī erat ad Genāvam acts as an Adjective and describes the noun pontem.

501 3. As an Adverb (Adverbial Clause) :

cum sīs mortālis, mortālia cūrēs, since you are mortal, care for mortal (things).

Here the Clause cum sīs mortālis acts as an Adverb of Cause and modifies the verb cūrēs.

II. FORMS OF SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

502 Subordinate clauses are joined to the principal clause by an introducing word. The introducing word is either a Conjunction, a Relative, or an Interrogative :

1. Conjunction : rogō ut veniās, I ask that you come.
2. Relative : bis dat, quī cito dat, who gives quickly, gives twice.
3. Interrogative : quaerō quis dederit, I ask who has given (it).

I. CONJUNCTIONAL CLAUSES

503 Conjunctional clauses are introduced by the Subordinate Conjunctions (254-261).

Transition to the Conjunctional Clause

504 Subordinate clauses without a conjunction often occur after verbs expressing a Wish, Command, or Need :

1. velim, nōlim, mālim ; vellem, nōllem, māllem.

2. The Imperatives fac and cavē.

3. licet, oportet, necesse est.

4. Sometimes after volō, nōlō, mālō and verbs of Asking or Commanding.

velim dīcās, I wish you would tell.

fac mē amēs, see (that) you love me.

condemnētur necesse est, be condemned he must.

rogō hōc, dīcet, (if) I ask this, he will say.

ōrō tē, virum tē praebeās, I pray you, show yourself a man.

505 Such sentences were formed by huddling together two independent sentences without change of form. Thus ōrō tē virum tē praebeās easily falls apart into the two sentences ōrō tē, I pray you, and virum tē praebeās, show yourself a man (482). But when the two are put together, ōrō becomes the leading verb which governs tē as Accusative of the Person and the subordinate Substantive Clause (498) virum tē praebeās like an Accusative of the Thing (318).

1. CLAUSES OF PURPOSE

506 Clauses of Purpose are introduced by ut (utī) or quō, that, or by nē or quōminus, that not, and always take the Subjunctive.

imperō tibi ut abeās, I order you to depart (that you depart).

praesidia dispōnit quō facilius hostēs prohibeantur, he stations guards that the enemy may be more easily repelled.

ōrāvit nē ēnūntiāret, he begged that he would not tell.

quid obstat quōminus sit beātus, what is-to-keep (him) from being happy?

507 The usual introducing word is ut or (in negative clauses) nē. quō (= ut eō, that thereby) is an Ablative of Means, and is regularly used when the clause contains a Comparative word or suggestion. quōminus (that thereby . . . not) is the negative of quō. It is used after verbs of Hindering, and may be translated from.

508 ut nē sometimes occurs as a strengthened form instead of nē:
ut nē quid agāmus, that we may not do anything.

ut nōn occurs only when the nōn belongs to some one word and not to the whole clause.

ut nōn ējectus sed invitātus īvisse videāris, that you may seem to have departed, not (as one) expelled, but invited.

This rhetorical use must not be confused with the use of ut nōn in introducing Clauses of Result (519).

509 Clauses of Purpose are either Substantive or Adverbial.

510 I. Substantive clauses of Purpose fill out or complete what is implied in the leading verb.

Such clauses are used chiefly as Object of the leading verb:
suīs ut idem faciant, imperat, he orders his (men) to do the same thing.

Here ut idem faciant is a Substantive Clause of Purpose, used as the Object of imperat.

511 Substantive clauses of Purpose occur after verbs in which the action looks toward the future—that is, verbs of Will or Aim.

These include especially:

512 1. Verbs of Asking, Commanding, Warning, Persuading, Allowing:

Ubiī ōrābant, ut sibi auxilium ferret, the Ubii kept asking that he would bring them help.

militēs cohortātus est ut impetum sustinērent, he exhorted his soldiers to withstand the attack.

concēdō ut abeās, I allow you to go.

513 2. Verbs of Resolving and Striving :

dēcrēvit senātus ut cōsulēs vidērent, the Senate decreed that the consuls should see to it.

ēnītī dēbēs ut vincās, you must strive to conquer.

cūrā ut quam primum intellegam, take care that I learn as soon as possible.

514 3. Verbs of Hindering ; used with quōminus or nē :

aetās nōn impedit quōminus agrī colendī studia teneāmus, age does not hinder us from following the pursuits of agriculture.

impedior nē plūra dīcam, I am prevented from saying more.

515 4. Verbs of Wishing :

optāvit Phaēthōn ut in currum patris tollerētur, Phaeton desired to be borne (aloft) in his father's chariot.

516 5. Verbs of Fearing.

Notice that with these verbs ut means that not and nē means that :

vereor ut veniat, I fear that he will not come = I am fearful : (O) that he may come. [Here the coming is not expected.]

vereor nē veniat, I fear that he will come = I am fearful : may he not come. [Here the coming is expected.]

517 II. Adverbial Clauses of Purpose supplement the meaning of the leading verb, and merely state the purpose of the action :

edō ut vivam, I eat to live (that I may live).

Here ut vivam states the purpose of edō and modifies it like an Adverb of Cause (because I would live).

vēnī ut vidērem, I came to see.

ut amēris, amābilis estō, that you may be loved, be lovable.

gallinae pennīs fivent pullōs, nē frīgore laedantur, hens shelter (their) chickens with (their) wings, lest they be hurt by the cold.

- 518 The purpose is often suggested by some Demonstrative expression in the principal clause; such as idcircō, ideō, proptereā, on that account, therefore, eō, eā mente, eō cōsiliō, with that intent, for this reason:

litterās ad tē eō mīsī, ut rescriberēs, I sent you a letter for this reason—that you might answer it.

2. CLAUSES OF RESULT

- 519 Clauses of Result are introduced by ut, (so) that, or by ut nōn, (so) that not, and always take the Subjunctive:

sōl efficit ut omnia flōreant, the sun makes all things flourish (literally, so that all things flourish).

mōns impendēbat, ut perpaucī prohibēre possent, a mountain hung over, so that a very few could block (the way).

- 520 Clauses of Result are either Substantive or Adverbial.

- 521 I. Substantive Clauses of Result fill out or complete what is implied in the leading verb.

Such clauses are used chiefly as Subject or Object, and sometimes as an Appositive.

They occur after

- 522 1. Verbs of Accomplishing:

sōl efficit ut omnia flōreant, the sun makes all things flourish.

523 2. Impersonal Verbs of Happening, Following, Remaining :
saepe fit ut hominēs fallantur, it often happens that men are mistaken.

sī vērum nōn est, sequitur ut falsum sit, if it is not true, it follows that it is false.

restat ut dīcam, it remains for me to say.

524 3. Some words of Law and Custom :

mōs Rōmānōrum erat ut bīnōs habērent cōsulēs, it was a custom of the Romans to have two consuls (at a time).

525 4. A Comparative with quam :

vīvēbat lautius quam ut invidiam effugeret, he lived too lavishly to escape envy.

526 The Result is often suggested by a neuter demonstrative in the leading clause :

id facere cōnantur, ut ē fīnibus suīs exeant, they try to accomplish this, (namely) to move out of their territory.

sōlī hōc contingit sapientī, ut nihil invītus faciat, to do nothing against one's own will,—this belongs to the wise alone.

527 II. Adverbial Clauses of Result supplement the meaning of the leading verb, and merely state the result of the action.

mōns impendēbat, ut perpaucī prohibēre possent, a mountain hung over, so that a very few could block the way.

528 The Result is often suggested by some correlative to ut, especially by tālis, tantus, ejus modī, ita, sic, tantopere, adeō, or by the demonstratives hīc, is, idem, ille, used in the sense of tālis or tantus :

tantōs sibi spīritūs sūmpserat, ut ferendus nōn vidērētur, he had put on such airs, that he seemed unendurable.

ita vīxī, ut nōn frūstrā mē nātum exīstimem, I have so lived that I do not think I was born in vain.

eā celeritāte iērunt, ut hostēs impetum sustinēre nōn possent, they advanced with such swiftness that the foe could not withstand the attack.

3. CLAUSES OF TIME

529 Clauses of Time are Adverbial, and take the Indicative or Subjunctive. They are introduced as follows :

530 1. By postquam, after, ubi, ut, when, cum primum, ubi primum, simul, simul ac (simul atque), as soon as.

Here the time of the leading verb is later than that of the subordinate clause.

531 These clauses regularly refer to a single past action, and take the Perfect Indicative :

postquam hostēs fugāvit, flūmen Axonam exercitum trānsdūxit, after he routed the foe, he led (his) army across the river Axona.

quī ut perōrāvit, surrēxit Clōdius, when he finished speaking, up rose Clodius.

532 But the Pluperfect Indicative is used—

1. To express past time with greater exactness.

nōnō annō postquam vēnerat, in the ninth year after he came.

2. To express repeated action, with ubi, ut, simul atque :

ubi nostrōs ēgredientēs cōspexerant, adoriēbantur, when (ever) they noticed our (soldiers) disembarking, they attacked (them).

533 2. By dum, dōnec, quoad, while, as long as.

Here the time of the leading verb is the same as that of the subordinate clause.

These clauses usually take the Indicative, but clauses of expected action take the Subjunctive and are translated until :

abī, dum est facultās, go! while you have a chance.
dōnec eris fēlix multōs numerābis amīcōs, so long as you are lucky, you will count up many friends.
expectāvit dum nāvēs convenīrent, he waited until the ships should assemble.

For dum with Subjunctive of Proviso see 565.

quamdiū, as long as, always takes the Indicative.

quamdiū potuit, tacuit, he kept still as long as he could.

534 3. By antequam, priusquam, before (that), ere.

Here the time of the leading verb is earlier than that of the subordinate clause.

Each may be written as two words, ante . . . quam, prius . . . quam.

They are used with the Indicative to express a known fact or with the Present Subjunctive to express an anticipated fact :

priusquam lūcet, adsunt, before it is dawn, they are here.

ante vidēmus fulgōrem quam sonum audiāmus, we see the flash ere we hear the sound.

[CLAUSES WITH cum]

“cum temporal”

535 4. By cum, when, whenever, to express past, present, or future time with a corresponding tense of the Indicative :

Rōmae videor esse, cum tuās litterās legō, when I am reading a letter of yours, I seem to be in Rome.

“cum historical”

536 In expressing past time the Indicative in a historical tense (161) states the particular time when something happened, and the Subjunctive in the Imperfect or Pluperfect the surroundings or situation in which it happened :

Gallō nārrāvī, cum proximē Rōmae fuī, quid audīsem (189), when I was last in Rome, I told Gallus what I had heard.

Zēnōnem, cum Athēnīs essem, audiēbam frequēns, being in Athens, I regularly used-to-hear Zeno (lecture).

The Subjunctive is the usual construction.

“cum inverse”

- 537 In sentences of sudden or unexpected action the subordinate cum-clause often contains the leading thought and the principal clause contains the dependent thought. The principal clause comes first, often with jam, already, vix, aegrē, hardly, or nōndum, not yet. The cum-clause is put last, often with repente or subitō, suddenly :

jam subībat mūrōs, cum repente in eum ērum-punt Rōmānī, he was already coming-up-to the walls, when suddenly the Romans dash out upon him.

Here the regular arrangement would be, cum subībat, ērum-punt Rōmānī, when he was coming, the Romans dash out.

“cum inverse” takes the Indicative.

“cum coincident”

- 538 When both clauses must have the same Subject and Tense, cum with the Indicative is often used to show that the action of the principal and subordinate clauses coincides :

cum tacent, clāmant, when they hold their peace, they cry aloud.

omnia tribuistī, cum eī rēgium nōmen concessistī, when you yielded him the royal title, you granted every-thing.

“cum coincident” takes the Indicative.

“cum relative”

- 539 After words of Time cum often has the force of a Relative Pronoun (= quō). The cum-clause then becomes Attributive (500):

clārus fuit ille diēs cum . . ., glorious was that day when (= in which).

fuit tempus cum Germānōs Gallī virtūte superārent, there was a time when the Gauls surpassed the Germans in valor.

So est cum, fuit cum, erit cum, there is, was, will be (a time) when.

“cum relative” takes the Indicative or, oftener, the Subjunctive.

- 540 For cum in clauses of Cause and Concession see 542, 571.

4. CLAUSES OF CAUSE

- 541 Clauses of Cause are Adverbial, and take the Indicative or Subjunctive. They are introduced as follows:

“cum causal”

- 542 1. By cum, since, and take the Subjunctive:
quae cum ita sint, since this is so (304).
Aeduī, cum sē dēfendere nōn possent, lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt, since the Aedui could not defend themselves, they sent (447) envoys to Caesar.
- 543 2. By quandō, since, and take the Indicative:
quandō ad mājōra nātī sumus, since we are born for greater things.
- 544 3. By quod, (in) that, quia, because, quoniam, inasmuch as, since, and take the Indicative or Subjunctive.

- 545 The Indicative is used when the reason of the speaker or writer is asserted; the Subjunctive when the reason of some one else is reported:

Indicative with quod, quia, quoniam tibi, quod abes, grātulor, I congratulate you that you are absent.

concedō, quia necesse est, I yield, because I must.
sōlus erō, quoniam nōn licet esse tuum, I'll be alone, since I may not be thine.

Subjunctive with quod, quia, quoniam

- 546 Sōcratēs accūsātus est quod corrumpere juvenitē- tem, Socrates was accused (on the ground) that he was corrupting the youth. [So his accusers said.]

māter irāta est, quia nōn redierim, mother was angry, (saying it was) because I did not come back.

Such Subjunctives are really in Indirect Discourse, with the verb of Saying implied (597).

- 547 A rejected reason is introduced by nōn quod, nōn quō, nōn quia, not because, or by nōn quod nōn, nōn quō nōn, nōn quīn, not because . . . not, and usually takes the Subjunctive: nōn quod doleant, not because they are suffering. [As might be supposed.]

nōn quīn ab eō dissentiam, not that I do not disagree with him.

- 548 But a fact stated as the rejected reason takes the Indicative: nōn quia multīs dēbeō, not because I am in debt to many. [As in fact I am.]

- 549 As the conjunction quod (in) that, (for the reason) that, is nothing but quod, which, that, the neuter of the relative pronoun used with a causal meaning, it is easy to confuse the two uses. But notice that

The Conjunctional quod-clause acts as an Adverb of cause (Adverbial Clause, 501).

The Relative quod-clause acts as a Noun (Substantive Clause, 498) :

gaudeō quod tē interpellāvī, I am glad that I interrupted you. Conjunctive clause (cause of gaudeō).
quod rediit mirābile videtur, that he returned seems marvelous. Relative clause (acts as Subject of videtur).

5. CLAUSES OF CONDITION

550 The Conditional Clause is introduced by sī, if, sī nōn, if not, sī minus, if not, nisi, unless, or sīn, but if. It is Adverbial (501).

It is always part of a Conditional Sentence :

sī vīs, potes, if you will, you can.

THE CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

551 The Conditional Sentence is made up of

1. The Condition, or subordinate clause, and
2. The Conclusion, or principal clause.

Thus in sī vīs, potes, the Condition is sī vīs, if you will, and the Conclusion is potes, you can.

The Condition is also called the Prótasis, and the Conclusion the Apódosis.

552 Conditional Sentences take the Indicative or the Subjunctive.

Both the Condition and Conclusion are regularly in the same Mood ; very frequently in the same Tense.

FIRST KIND: CONDITION AS FACT

553 I. The Indicative is used when the Condition is stated as if it were a Fact. Any tense may be used :

sī adest, bene est, if he is here, it is well.

sī nescīs, tibi ignōscō, if you don't know, I forgive you.

hī, sī quid erat dūrius concurrēbant, if there was any very-hard (fighting), these men rushed in.

sī fortūna volet, fīēs cōsul, if fortune (shall) will it, consul you will be.

sī peccāvī, īnsciēns fēcī, if I have sinned, I did so unknowing(ly).

convincam, sī negās, I will prove it, if you (now) deny it.

sī quis equitum dēciderat, circumsistēbant, if (= whenever) any horseman fell, they stood about him (literally, were standing).

- 554 When the Conclusion has a future meaning it sometimes takes the Subjunctive or Imperative instead of the regular Indicative:

quod sī nōn possumus facere, moriāmur, if we cannot do it, let us die.

sī peccāvī, mihi ignōsce, if I have sinned, forgive me.

SECOND KIND: CONDITION AS POSSIBLE

- 555 II. The Present and Perfect Subjunctive are used when the Condition is stated as Possible.

The Present and Perfect are used in these Conditions with little or no difference of meaning.

sī adsit, bene sit, if he should be here, it would be well.

sī adfuerit, bene sit, if he should be here, it would be well.

dī sī cūrent, bene bonīs sit, should the gods care, (all) would go well with the good.

556 The Conclusion is sometimes in the Present or Future Indicative :

memoria minuitur, nisi eam exerceās, the memory weakens, unless one exercises it (494).

sī cupiās, licēbit, should you (so) desire, it will be allowed.

THIRD KIND: CONDITION AS CONTRARY TO FACT

557 III. The Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive are used when the Condition is stated as Contrary to Fact.

The Imperfect is used for Present Conditions and the Pluperfect for Past Conditions :

sī adesset, bene esset, if he were here, it would be well.

sī viveret, verba ejus audirētis, were he alive, you would hear his statement.

sī adfuisset, bene fuisset, if he had been here, it would have been well.

nisi milites essent defessi, hostium copiae delētae essent, if the soldiers had not been worn out, the forces of the enemy would have been destroyed.

nisi ante Rōmā profectus essēs, nunc eam certē relinquerēs, if you had not left Rome before, you would certainly leave it now.

558 The Imperfect Subjunctive is sometimes used to express continued or usual past action :

sī nihil litteris adjuvarentur, numquam sē ad eārum studium contulissent, if they were getting no help from literature, they never would have betaken themselves to its study.

quae nisi essent in senibus, nōn summum cōsiliū mājōrēs nostrī appellāssent senātum, if these (traits) were not usual in older men, our ancestors would not have called our highest council the Senate.

Opposing and Negative Conditions

559 nisi, unless, negatives the whole clause :

parva sunt forīs arma, nisi est cōsilium domī, arms avail little abroad, unless there is wisdom at home.

560 sī nōn, if not, negatives the single word which follows the nōn :

quod sī nōn possumus facere, moriāmur, if we can't do it, let us die!

561 sī nōn (or sī minus) introduces an opposing negative Condition.

1. Repeating a preceding positive condition in negative form :

sī fēceris, māgnam habēbō grātiam; sī nōn fēceris, ignōscam, if you do it, I shall be very grateful; if you don't, I'll forgive (you).

2. Modifying a Conclusion containing at, tamen, certē :
cum spē, sī nōn bonā, at aliquā tamen vīvō, still, I am living; if not with good hope, yet with some.

NOTE: sī minus is used only when the verb in the repeated condition is omitted :

ēdūc tēcum omnēs tuōs; sī minus, quam plūrimōs, take with you all your (followers); if not, as many as possible.

562 sīn, but if, introduces an opposing positive Condition :

sī vērum est . . . , sīn falsum . . . , if it is true . . . , but if false . . .

Conditional Clauses of Wish and Proviso

563 These clauses are Adverbial. They are introduced by dum, modo, dummodo, if only, provided that, and take the Subjunctive. They contain a Condition stated either as a Wish or as a Proviso. The negative is nē.

564 Wish (if only):

dum nē tibi videor, nōn labōrō, if only I do not seem so to you, I do not worry.

multī honesta neglegunt, dummodo potentiam cōnsequantur, many neglect honor, if only they may gain power.

565 Proviso (provided that, so):

valētūdō modo bona sit, provided the health be good. ōderint, dum metuant, let them hate, so they fear.

dum nē, if only . . . not, provided . . . not, must not be confused with nēdum, much less:

nēdum tū possīs, much less could you.

6. CLAUSES OF COMPARISON

566 Clauses of Comparison are Adverbial.

567 I. Conditional Clauses of Comparison are introduced by sī following some word meaning as or than, and take the Subjunctive.

These words (with sī added) are ac sī, ut sī, quasi, quam sī, velut (sī), tamquam (sī):

velut sī cōram adesset, horrēbant, they trembled, just as if he were there before them.

quid hīs testibus ūtor, quasi rēs dubia sit, why do I use these witnesses, as if (indeed) the matter were obscure.

568 II. Correlative Clauses of Comparison are introduced by ut, sicut, quemadmodum, as, and take the Indicative.

A correlative demonstrative word, such as ita, sīc, item, so, likewise, often stands in the principal clause:

perge ut instituistī, go on as you have started.

ut sēmentem fēceris, ita metēs, as you have done your sowing, so shall you reap.

quemadmodum vellent, imperārent, they should give orders, as they pleased.

7. CLAUSES OF CONCESSION

569 Clauses of Concession are Adverbial.

Notice that what is conceded in the subordinate clause is opposed in the principal clause, which often contains tamen, certē, or sānē.

570 I. With quamquam, although, they generally take the Indicative :

quamquam festinās, nōn est mora longa, although you are in haste, the delay is not long.

NOTE: quamquam in a principal clause means and yet: quamquam quid loquor, and yet why do I speak?

571 II. With cum, licet, although, ut, (grant) that, nē, (grant) that . . . not, they take the Subjunctive :

Atticus honōrēs nōn petiit, cum eī patērent, Atticus did not seek honors, although they were open to him.

licet omnēs fremant, ego nōn tacēbō, though all should rave (at me), I shall not hold-my-peace.

vērūm ut hōc nōn sit, (grant) that this is not true.

nē sit summum malum dolor: malum certē est, (grant) that pain is not the chief evil: an evil it surely is.

572 III. With etsī, tametsī, etiāmsī, quamvis, even if, although, they take the Indicative or Subjunctive like Conditional clauses with sī :

etsī mōns Cevenna altissimā nive iter impediēbat, Caesar tamen profectus est, Caesar started nevertheless, although the Cevennes mountains were blocking (his) way with very deep snow.

quamvis sis molestus, numquam tē esse cōfitebor malum, though you may be annoying, I will never admit that you are bad.

NEGATIVE CONJUNCTIONAL CLAUSES WITH quīn

- 573 The negative conjunction quīn, why not, that not (but, nay), is made of the relative adverb quī, why, and ne, not.
- 574 I. It is sometimes used in principal clauses to state commands and direct questions :
- quīn ūnō verbō dīc, nay, tell (me) in one word.
quīn cōnscendimus equōs, why not mount our horses?
- II. Otherwise it always introduces subordinate clauses which follow principal clauses of negative meaning :
- nēmō est quīn audierit, there is nobody who has not heard.
- 575 Subordinate clauses with quīn always take the Subjunctive. This happens especially after :
- 576 1. Words of Doubt or Omission. (Like an Indirect Question.)
- nōn dubium est quīn uxōrem nōlit fīlius, there is no doubt that (my) son does not want a wife.
nihil abest quīn sim miserrimus, nothing is lacking to make me most unhappy (literally, why I should not be).
- 577 2. Verbs of Hindering. (Purpose or Result.)
- retinērī nōn potuerant quīn tēla conjicerent, they could not be kept from hurling their pikes.
- 578 3. nūllus, nēmō, nihil, quis. (Result or Characteristic.)
- nēmō est quīn audierit, there is nobody who has not heard.
quis est quīn cernat, who is there that does not perceive?
- 579 4. facere nōn possum, fierī nōn potest. (Result.)
- facere nōn possum quīn tibi grātiās agam, I can not help thanking you.
fierī nōn potest quīn tibi grātiās agam, it is impossible for me not to thank you.

II. RELATIVE CLAUSES

580 Relative Clauses are introduced by relative words, especially by the relative pronoun quī, who, that (147, 299). The negative is nōn.

581 Other relative words used are—

1. The Adjectives quantus, as much, quālis, as, quot, as many (152).

2. Adverbs such as ubi, when, where, unde, whence, quō, where, whither, quotiēns, as often as, and the relative adverbs so often used as conjunctions, such as quandō, cum, when, ut, utī, quam, as.

582 Compound or General Relatives are those formed by doubling, or by adding -cumque, -ever.

Thus quisquis, quicumque, whoever, quantuscumque, however much, ubicumque, wherever.

583 Clauses introduced by General Relatives regularly take the Indicative :

quidquid id est, whatever it is.

quācumque iter fēcit, wherever he made his way.

584 Relative Clauses in form, and often in use, are like adjectives. But they are more often used with the force of an adverb.

585 I. When the Relative Clause simply describes, like an adjective (500), it takes the Indicative :

pōns quī erat ad Genāvam, the bridge which was near Geneva.

Here quī erat ad Genāvam describes pōns, and does nothing more.

586 II. When the Relative Clause, like the Conjunctional (503), expresses Purpose, Result, Time, Cause, Condition, Comparison, or Concession, it is Adverbial in force.

Notice that Relative Clauses used adverbially and Conjunctional Clauses express in the main the same ideas, with the same use of moods and tenses.

1. Purpose (517):

equitātum praemittit quī videant, he sends forward cavalry to see (who may see).

2. Characteristic (Result, 527):

secūtae sunt tempestātēs quae nostrōs in castrīs continērent, there came storms that kept our (soldiers) in camp.

NOTE: It is doubtful whether there are any relative clauses of pure Result. Most, if not all, so-called relative clauses of Result are better explained as clauses of Characteristic (587).

3. Time (with relative adverb, 529):

quandō omnēs creatī sunt, tum ad eōs deus fātur, when all were created, then to them spake the god.

4. Cause (541):

ō fortunāte adulēscēns, quī tuae virtūtis Homērum praecōnem invēneris, happy youth! who hast found a Homer (as) the herald of thy valor.

5. Condition (550):

quī vidēret, urbem captam dīceret, whoever saw it, would say the city (was) taken. Here quī = sī quis, if any one, whoever.

6. Comparison (with relative adverb, 566):

mājus gaudium fuit quam quod ūniversum hominēs acciperent, (their) joy was greater than that men commonly experience.

7. Concession (569):

absolvite eum, quī sē fateātur pecūniās accēpisse, although he confesses that he has accepted money, acquit him.

Clauses of Characteristic

587 A relative clause which states definitely the natural result or character of something suggested indefinitely in the principal clause, is called a Clause of Characteristic. Such clauses are Attributive, and take the Subjunctive:

nōn is sum quī terrear, I'm not the man to be frightened (literally, who may be frightened).

secūtae sunt tempestātēs quae nostrōs in castrīs continērent, there came storms that kept our (soldiers) in camp.

588 Clauses of Characteristic are used after

1. Principal clauses containing is, ējusmodī, tālis, tantus, tam:

ea est Rōmāna gēns quae victa quiēscere nesciat, the Roman race is one that knows not (how) to stay quiet (when) conquered.

2. General expressions, positive or negative, containing est quī, sunt quī:

sunt quī putent, there are (some) who think.

quid est quod velīs, what is it that you wish?

erant itinera duo quibus itineribus exīre possent, there were two routes by which they could depart.

nēmō est quī nesciat, there is nobody who does not know.

rēs est ūna sōlaque quae possit facere et servāre beātum,
'tis the one and only thing that can make and keep (you) happy.

3. dīgnus, worthy, indīgnus, unworthy, idōneus, fit:

rēs dīgna est quam cōsīderēmus, the matter is worth our consideration (literally, worthy, which we may consider).

indīgnus est quī imperet, he is unworthy to rule.

idōneus quī ad bellum mittātur, fit to be sent to the war.

589 Relative clauses stating a restriction are characteristic:

quod sciam, so far as I know. They are usually Subjunctive.

Catōnis orātiōnēs, quās quidem lēgerim, Cato's orations, so far, at least, as I have read them (= those that I have read).

III. INTERROGATIVE CLAUSES (INDIRECT QUESTIONS)

590 Subordinate interrogative clauses, or Indirect Questions, are Substantive clauses (498) used as the subject or object of verbs of asking, saying, thinking, or of interest and rēfert. They are introduced by the same interrogative words that are used in Direct Questions (280, 281). The verb is always Subjunctive.

The Indirect Question is one form of Indirect Discourse (597):

quaerō quid faciās, I ask what you are doing.

dīc mihi ubi fueris, tell me where you were.

mīror cūr mē accūsēs, I wonder why you accuse me.

multum interest quis dīcat, who says (so) is quite important.

591 Indirect Questions may easily be confused with Relative Clauses (580). It must be remembered that the Indirect Question differs from the Relative Clause:

1. In depending on a special kind of verb (asking, saying, thinking).

2. In its introducing word (an Interrogative).

dīc mihi quid habeās, tell me what you have, contains an Indirect Question.

dā mihi quod habēs, give me what you have, contains a Relative Clause.

ūtile est scīre quid futūrum sit, it is useful to know what will happen, contains an Indirect Question.

effugere nēmō potest quod futūrum est, none can escape what will happen, contains a Relative Clause.

592 The negative particles (240, 5) num, -ne, are used in Indirect Questions in the sense of whether or if. But nōnne is used only after quaerō, and is rare :

num quid vellet rogāvī, I asked if he wanted anything.

rogāvit essentne fūsi hostēs, he asked whether the enemy were routed.

593 An Indirect Question depending on a verb of waiting or trying may be introduced by sī, if, whether :

expectābam sī quid scrīberēs, I was waiting (to see) if you would write anything.

cōnantur sī perrumpere possent, they try whether they can break through.

594 Indirect Double Questions are usually introduced by the same particles that are used in Direct Double Questions (281) :

dīc utrum vērum an falsum sit	} say whether it is true or false. dīc vērumne an falsum sit dīc vērum an falsum sit dīc vērum falsumne sit dīc vērum sit necne , say whether it is true or not.

595 The second part of an Indirect Double Question often occurs alone after haud sciō an, nesciō an, meaning I don't know but, I almost think, I fancy :

haud sciō an falsum sit, I almost think it is false.

SYNOPSIS OF THE MOODS

A. IN PRINCIPAL CLAUSES

- I. INDICATIVE: action of verb as fact. Negative nōn.
No introducing words.
- II. SUBJUNCTIVE: action of verb as thought of.
1. As willed: Volitive Subjunctive. Negative nē.
No introducing words.
In Commanding: Jussive Subjunctive.
In Conceding: Concessive Subjunctive.
 2. As desired: Optative Subjunctive. Negative nē.
utinam often used as introducing word.
 3. As possible: Conditional Subjunctive. Negative nōn.
As what can be: Potential Subjunctive.
No introducing words.
As possible (= Conclusion) on any condition (= Condition): Conditional Subjunctive.
Introducing words: Conclusion, none.
[Condition, sī, sī nōn, nisi, sīn, sī minus.]
- III. IMPERATIVE: action of verb as command. Negative nē (see 496).
No introducing words.

B. IN SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

Indicative only in clauses of fact; otherwise the Subjunctive.

USES OF SUBORDINATE CLAUSES.

1. As Noun: Substantive Clause.
2. As Adjective: Attributive Clause.
3. As Adverb: Adverbial Clause.

FORMS OF SUBORDINATE CLAUSES.

- I. Introduced by a Conjunction: Conjunctive Clause.
1. Purpose: Subjunctive always. Negative nē, quōminus.
Introducing words: Uses: Substantive, positive, ut (utī), quō. Adverbial.
negative, nē, quōminus.
 2. Result: Subjunctive always. Negative nōn.
Introducing words: Uses: Substantive, positive, ut. Adverbial.
negative, ut nōn.

3. Time : Indicative or Subjunctive. Negative nōn.
 Introducing words: Use: Adverbial only.
 With Indicative : postquam, ubi, ut, cum primum, ubi primum, simul ac.
 With Indicative or Subjunctive: cum, dum, dōnec, quoad, antequam, priusquam.
4. Cause : Indicative or Subjunctive. Negative nōn.
 Introducing words: Use: Adverbial only.
 With Indicative : quandō.
 With Subjunctive : cum.
 With either : quod, quia, quoniam.
5. Condition : Indicative or Subjunctive. Negative nōn.
 Introducing words: sī, sī nōn, Use: Adverbial only.
nisi, sin, sī minus.

KINDS OF CONDITIONS

(1) As a fact :

Condition in Indicative (any tense).

Conclusion in Indicative (any tense). See 554.

(2) As possible :

Condition in Subjunctive (Present or Perfect).

Conclusion in Subjunctive (Present or Perfect).

(3) As contrary to fact :

Condition in Subjunctive (Imperfect or Pluperfect).

Conclusion in Subjunctive (Imperfect or Pluperfect).

6. Comparison : Indicative or Subjunctive. Negative nōn.
 Introducing words: Use: Adverbial only.
 With Indicative : ut, sicut, quemadmodum.
 With Subjunctive : ac sī, ut sī, quasi, quam sī, velut(sī), tamquam(sī).
7. Concession : Indicative or Subjunctive. Negative nōn or nē.
 Introducing words: Use: Adverbial only.
 With Indicative : quamquam. Negative nōn.
 With Subjunctive : cum, licet, ut. Negative nē.
 With either : etsī, tametsī, etiamsī, quamvis. Negative nōn.

II. Introduced by a Relative : Relative Clause.

Moods: Same as in Conjunctional Clauses (Purpose, Result, etc.).

Introducing words: quī, quantus, Uses: Attributive, quālis, quot, ubī, unde, quō, Adverbial.
quotiēns, quandō, cum, ut(utī), quam.Also quisquis, quicumque, ubicumque, and other General Relatives.

III. Introduced by an Interrogative : Indirect Question.

Introducing words: Use: Substantive only.

In Simple Question: interrogative Mood: Subjunctive only. words (280, 281) num, -ne, (sī).In Double Question: utrum . . . an (see 594).

INDIRECT DISCOURSE

597 A sentence quoted in its exact words without any change is in Direct Discourse (ōrātiō rēcta):
Solōn dīcēbat: nēmō ante obitum est beātus, Solon used to say "Nobody is happy before (his) death."

598 A sentence quoted in dependence on a verb of Saying or Thinking is in Indirect Discourse (ōrātiō oblīqua):

Solōn dīcēbat nēminem ante obitum esse beātum, Solon used to say that nobody was happy before (his) death.

The sentence in Indirect Discourse is the Object of the verb of Saying or Thinking.

The rules for turning Direct into Indirect Discourse are as follows:

MOODS

IN PRINCIPAL CLAUSES

599 I. Declarative sentences go into the Infinitive, with the Subject expressed in the Accusative; Interrogative and Imperative sentences go into the Subjunctive.

600 Declarative:

mōns ab hostibus tenētur, the mountain is held by the enemy. (Direct.)

dīcit montem ab hostibus tenērī, he says that the mountain is held by the enemy. (Indirect.)

id faciam, I shall do it. (Direct.)

Caesar dīxit sē id factūrum (esse), Caesar said that he would do it. (Indirect.)

601 Interrogative :

quid tibi vīs? cūr venīs? what do you want? why do you come? (Direct.)

pauca respondit: quid sibi vellet, cūr venīret, he replied briefly: what did he want? why did he come? (Indirect.)

602 Imperative :

lēgātōs mittite, send envoys. (Direct.)

respondit lēgātōs mittant, he replied (that) they should send envoys. (Indirect.)

603 As Rhetorical questions (283) are really Declarative, they go into the Infinitive :

plēbs fremit: quid sē vīvere, the people roar out: why are they alive (at all)?

The Direct form is quid vīvimus, why are we alive (at all)?—a Rhetorical question.

604 Imperative sentences usually go into the Subjunctive without ut or with nē :

respondit lēgātōs mittant, he replied (that) they should send envoys.

obsecrāvit nē quid gravius in frātre statueret, he besought him not to do anything very severe to his brother.

But jubeō, command, and vetō, forbid, govern the Infinitive :

nāvēs aedificārī jubet, he orders ships to be built.

IN SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

605 II. Subordinate clauses become or remain Subjunctive :

concēdō, quia necesse est, I yield because it is necessary. (Direct.)

dīcō mē concēdere, quia necesse sit, I say that I yield because it is necessary. (Indirect.)

dīcēbam mē concēdere, quia necesse esset, I was saying that I yielded because it was necessary. (Indirect.)

But notice :

- 606 1. Relative clauses equal in force to a leading clause with a demonstrative (quī = et is, et ille), go into the Infinitive with the Subject in the Accusative :

ūnumquemque nostrum cēsent philosophī mundī esse partem, ex quō (= et ex eō) illud nātūrā cōsequī, philosophers think that each one of us is a part of the universe ;—and from this it naturally follows.

- 607 2. Clauses of simple fact or incidental explanation may remain in the Indicative :

certior factus est ex eā parte vīcī, quam Gallīs concesserat, omnēs discessisse, he was informed that all had departed from that part of the village which he had allotted to the Gauls.

quis neget haec omnia quae vidēmus deōrum potestāte administrārī, who could deny that all these (things) which we see are ruled by the power of the gods?

TENSES

- 608 III. Tenses of the Infinitive follow the rules for the Infinitive (632–636).

Tenses of the Subjunctive follow the rule for the Sequence of Tenses (462–471).

But after a historical tense the Present Subjunctive is often used to make the statement more vivid :

Caesar respondit, sī obsidēs dentur, sēsē pācem esse factūrum, Caesar replied that, if hostages should be given (instantly), he would make peace.

PERSONS

- 609 IV. After a verb of Saying or Thinking in the Third Person, verbs and pronouns in the First or Second Person change to the Third :

Ariovistus Caesarī dīxit :	Ariovistus said to Caesar :
(ego) in Galliam vēnī	I came into Gaul
sē in Galliam vēnisse	that he (Ariovistus) had come into Gaul
(tū) in Galliam vēnistī	you came into Gaul
illum in Galliam vēnisse	that he (Caesar) had come into Gaul

Notice that sē, the Reflexive Pronoun, refers to the Subject of dīxit (421, 422).

Notice that illum refers to some other person than the Subject of dīxit (426, 137).

610 Thus the First Personal ego, nōs, become sē; meus, noster, become suus (140).

The Second Personal tū, vōs, become ille or is (137).

611 After verbs of Saying or Thinking in the First Person, the verbs and pronouns do not change their Person :

DIRECT	INDIRECT
dīxī: (ego) in Galliam vēnī	mē in Galliam vēnisse
dīxī: (tū) in Galliam vēnistī	tē in Galliam vēnisse
dīxī: (ille) in Galliam vēnit	illum in Galliam vēnisse

612 After verbs of Saying or Thinking in the Second Person, the First Person changes to Second, the Second to First, and the Third remains Third :

DIRECT	INDIRECT
dīxistī: (ego) in Galliam vēnī	tē in Galliam vēnisse
dīxistī: (tū) in Galliam vēnistī	mē in Galliam vēnisse
dīxistī: (ille) in Galliam vēnit	illum in Galliam vēnisse

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE

613 The Condition becomes or remains Subjunctive, and the Conclusion becomes Infinitive :

sī hōc crēdō, errō, if I believe this, I am wrong.
dīcit, sī hōc crēdat, sē errāre, he says that, if he believes this, he is wrong.

- 614 But if the Conclusion was an Interrogative or Imperative sentence in Direct Discourse, it becomes Subjunctive. See 599.
sīn persevērāret, reminīscerētur prīstīnae virtūtis Helvētiōrum, but if he persisted (said they), he should remember the ancient valor of the Helvetians.

In Direct Discourse: sīn persevērās, reminīscere, if you persist, remember.

I. FIRST KIND: CONDITION AS FACT (553)

- 615 sī hōc crēdō, errō, if I believe this, I am wrong.
dīcit, sī hōc crēdat, sē errāre.
dīxit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errāre.
sī hōc crēdam, errābō, if I (shall) believe this, I shall be wrong.
dīcit, sī hōc crēdat, sē errātūrum esse.
dīxit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errātūrum esse.
sī hōc crēdebam, errāvī, if I believed this, I was wrong.
dīcit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errāvisse.
dīxit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errāvisse.

II. SECOND KIND: CONDITION AS POSSIBLE (555)

- 616 The Conclusion becomes Future Infinitive:
sī hōc crēdam, errem, if I should believe this, I should be wrong.
dīcit, sī hōc crēdat, sē errātūrum esse.
dīxit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errātūrum esse.

III. THIRD KIND: CONDITION CONTRARY TO FACT (557)

- 617 The Condition always remains unchanged in Tense (as well as Mood).

The Conclusion becomes Infinitive in the following manner:

1. The Imperfect Subjunctive becomes the Infinitive in -ūrum esse.

This is the Present Infinitive in Periphrastic form (188).

2. The Pluperfect Subjunctive becomes the Infinitive in -ūrum fuisse.

This is the Perfect Infinitive in Periphrastic form (188). — sī hōc crēderem, errārem, if I believed this, I would be in error.

sī hōc crēdidissem, errāvissem, if I had believed this, I would have been in error.

dīcit, } sī hōc crēderet, sē errātūrum esse.

dīxit, } sī hōc crēdidisset, sē errātūrum fuisse.

618 Notice that in passing into Indirect Discourse the Conditional sentences lose some of their differences of form, and consequently are at times less exact in meaning than in Direct Discourse. A striking example is dīxit, sī hōc crēderet, sē errātūrum esse, occurring in 615, 616, 617.

619 If the Conclusion is in the Passive Voice :

1. The Imperfect Subjunctive becomes futūrum esse (fore) ut with the Imperfect Subjunctive.

2. The Pluperfect Subjunctive becomes futūrum fuisse ut with the Imperfect Subjunctive :

nisi eō ipsō tempore pervēnisset, exīstimābant plērīque futūrum fuisse ut oppidum āmitterētur, had he not arrived at that very time, most (persons) thought the town would have been lost.

SUBJUNCTIVE BY ATTRACTION

620 Clauses which depend on a subordinate Subjunctive or a subordinate Infinitive, and form a necessary part of the thought, are attracted into the Subjunctive :

mōs est Syrācūsīs ut, sī quā dē rē ad senātum referātur, dicat sententiam quī velit, it is the custom at Syracuse that if anything is brought up in the Senate, (any one) who likes may speak his opinion.

Here sī ad senātum referātur and quī velit depend on the subordinate Subjunctive clause ut dīcat sententiam and are attracted into the Subjunctive.

mōs est Athēnīs laudārī in cōntiōne eōs, quī sint in proeliīs interfectī, it is the custom at Athens that those who have fallen in battle are publicly eulogized.

Here quī sint in proeliīs interfectī depends on the subordinate Infinitive clause laudārī in cōntiōne eōs, and is attracted into the Subjunctive.

Verbal Nouns and Adjectives (157)

- 621 The Verbal Nouns are the Infinitive, Gerund, and Supine. The Verbal Adjectives are the Participle and Gerundive.

THE INFINITIVE

- 622 The Infinitive acts as a neuter noun. It is chiefly used as Subject or Object :

errāre est hūmānum, to err is human. (Subject.)

vereor dīcere, I am afraid to say. (Object.)

- 623 The Infinitive, with or without a Subject Accusative, is used as the Subject of esse and impersonal verbs :

dulce et decōrum est prō patriā morī, to die for our country is sweet and noble.

mīrum est tē nihil scrībere, it is strange that you write nothing.

placuit Caesarī Avāricum incendi, Caesar thought Avaricum should be burnt.

- 624 The Infinitive is also used as a Predicate Noun (290) or an Appositive (291):

vīvere est cōgitāre, to live is to think. (Predicate Noun.)

ōrāculum erat datum victricēs Athēnās fore, the response had been given that Athens would be victor.
(Appositive.)

- 625 The Infinitive, with or without a Subject Accusative, is used as the Object :

scīre volēbat, he wanted to know.

dīcit montem ab hostibus tenērī, he says the mountain is held by the enemy.

- 626 I. It is used, without Subject Accusative, after verbs which need another verb with the same subject to complete their action.

Such are the auxiliary (or "helping") verbs cupiō, volō, nōlō, mālō; possum; dēbeō.

Also verbs meaning begin, continue, cease, as incipiō, pergō, dēsinō.

try, dare, strive, hasten, as cōnor, audeō, studeō, mātūrō.

purpose, prepare, decide, as cōgitō, parō, dēcernō.

accustom, teach, learn, know, as soleō, doceō, discō, sciō.

neglect, be satisfied, as neglegō, satis habeō.

hesitate, delay, fear, as dubitō, cunctor, vereor.

scīre volēbat, he wanted to know.

praeterita mūtāre nōn possumus, we cannot change the past.

proficīscī mātūrat, he hastens to set forth.

Rhēnum trānsire dēcrēverat, he had decided to cross the Rhine.

- 627 Exceptions occur, but are not frequent :

cupiō mē esse clēmentem, I wish to be considerate.

- 628 II. It is used with Subject Accusative after verbs of Saying and Thinking. (This is Indirect Discourse.)

The verbs of Saying include those of telling, promising, informing, accusing, admitting, and their opposites.

The verbs of Thinking include those of knowing, perceiving, remembering, hoping, suspecting, pretending, feeling, and their opposites :

dīcit montem ab hostibus tenēri, he says the mountain is held by the enemy.

prōmittit sē ventūrum esse, he promises to come.

nōsce tē esse hominem, know that you are a man.

tē advēnisse gaudeō, I am glad you have arrived.

629 Here may be included

jubeō, command, vetō, forbid, sinō, patior, allow, cōgō, compel, prohibeō, prevent, cupiō, volō, nōlō, mālō,—when governing an Infinitive having a different Subject :

Germānī vīnum importārī nōn sinunt, the Germans do not allow wine to be imported.

Hadriānus finem imperiū esse voluit Euphrātem, Hadrian wished the Euphrates to be the boundary of the empire.

630 Some special uses are as follows :

1. To express the End or Purpose :

quid habēs dīcere, what have you to say?

cūnctī suāsērunt Ītaliā petere, all advised to seek Italy.

2. After a few adjectives :

parātus audīre, prepared to hear.

cantārī dīgnus, worthy to be sung.

3. In exclamations; sometimes with -ne added to the Subject Accusative :

tē sic vexārī, you to be so troubled!

tēne hōc dīcere, you to say this!

mēne dēsistere, I to stop!

631 The Nominative is used with the Infinitive

1. Always as Subject of the Historical Infinitive.

This is the Present Infinitive used in lively narration instead of the Indicative.

Caesar Aeduōs frūmentum flāgitāre, Caesar keeps asking the Aedui for the grain.

2. Often as Predicate Noun or Adjective:

cōnsul esse potuī, I might have been consul.

omnēs student fieri beātī, all strive to become happy.

3. Often in Passive sentences:

dīcitur Homērus caecus fuisse, Homer is said to have been blind.

TENSES OF THE INFINITIVE

632 The Tenses of the Infinitive have no independent time of their own, but a time which depends on the leading verb.

633 The Present Infinitive expresses the same time as the time of the leading verb:

dīcit sē scribere, he says (now) he is writing (now).

dīcēbat sē scribere, he said (then) he was writing (then).

634 The Perfect Infinitive expresses time before the time of the leading verb:

dīcit sē scripsisse, he says (now) he has written (before now).

dīcēbat sē scripsisse, he said (then) he had written (before then).

635 The Future Infinitive expresses time after the time of the leading verb:

dīcit sē scriptūrum (esse), he says (now) he will write (later).

dīcēbat sē scriptūrum (esse), he said (then) he would write (later).

- 636 Verbs which lack the Participial Stem (171) supply their missing Future Infinitive by fore ut or futūrum esse ut with the Subjunctive:

spērō fore ut contingat id nōbīs, I hope (it may happen that) this good luck befalls us.

THE GERUND AND GERUNDIVE

- 637 The Gerund (157) is a noun with the force of an Active verb :

mēns cōgitandō alitur, the mind is nourished by thinking.

cōsilium urbem capiendī, a plan for taking the city (literally, of taking).

Here the Gerund capiendī governs urbem as Object.

The Gerund is not used in the Nominative or Vocative.

- 638 The Gerundive (157) is an adjective with the force of a Passive verb.

It acts as a Future Passive Participle, and, with sum, forms the Passive of the Periphrastic Conjugation (188). It expresses what must be done or ought to be done :

liber legendus, a book to be read (= that ought to be read).

cōsilium urbis capiendae, a plan for taking the city (literally, of the city to be taken).

Here the Gerundive capiendae agrees with urbis.

- 639 The Gerund is used as follows :

1. Genitive of Definition (348) :

ars scribendī, the art of writing.

modus vivendī, manner of living.

causa colloquendī, a reason for conferring.

Here belongs the Genitive after causā or grātiā, for the sake of.

hiemandī causā, for the sake of passing-the-winter.

Objective with Adjectives (352):

cupidus bellandī, desirous of waging war.

2. Dative of Purpose (344):

aqua ūtilis est bibendō, water is useful for drinking.

3. Accusative, only after prepositions ad, in, inter, ob:
dant sē ad lūdendum, they give themselves to playing.

4. Ablative (Means, 386):

mēns cōgitandō alitur, the mind is nourished by thinking.

Often with the prepositions ab, dē, ex, in:

in jubendō et vetandō, in commanding and forbidding.

ex discendō capiunt voluptātem, they get pleasure out-of learning.

640 The Gerundive in agreement with its noun is to be preferred to the Gerund governing a Direct Object.

Instead of the Gerund:

Gen. urbem capiendī,

Use the Gerundive:

urbis capiendae, of taking the city.

Dat. urbem capiendō, urbī capiendae, for taking the city.

Acc. ad urbem capiendum, ad urbem capiendam, for taking the city.

Abl. urbem capiendō, urbe capiendā, by taking the city.

641 But when the Object is a neuter pronoun or adjective used as a noun the Gerund must be used:

aliquid faciendī, of doing something (not alicūjus faciendī).

cupiditās plūra habendī, greed for having more (not plūrium habendōrum).

This avoids confusing the neuter and masculine genders.

642 The Genitives meī, tuī, suī, nostrī, vestrī, are used with Gerundives without regard to Gender:

vestrī adhortandī causā, for the sake of encouraging you.

mulier suī servandī causā aufūgit, the woman fled for the sake of saving herself.

643 The Gerundive is used as follows :

I. Attributive Adjective (295, Note) :

lĕgĕs observandae, laws to-be-respected.

II. Predicate Adjective (295, Note) :

lĕgĕs sunt observandae, laws are to-be-respected.

644 The Predicate use is common, and occurs

1. In the Passive of the Periphrastic Conjugation (188) with or without the Dative of the Agent (339) :

Caesarī omnia erant agenda, Caesar had to do everything (literally, everything had to be done by Caesar).

Intransitive verbs in this construction are always impersonal :

(mihi) eundum est, (I must go.

paenitendum est malī, (one should repent of evil.

ūtendum est divitiīs, nōn abūtendum, (we should use wealth, not abuse it.

2. In expressing Purpose after verbs of Giving, Sending, Caring, Permitting, Undertaking, and the like :

pontem faciendum cūrat, he orders a bridge made.

urbem diripiendam dedit, he gave-over the city to be plundered.

THE PARTICIPLE

645 Participles are adjectives in form and verbs in force.

They occur in the Present, Future, and Perfect Tenses as follows :

	PRESENT	FUTURE	PERFECT
Active Voice.	amāns , loving	amātūrus , about to love	_____
Passive Voice.	_____	_____	amātus , loved
Deponents.	ūtēns , using	ūsūrus , about to use	ūsus , (having used, using)

- 646 The Tenses of the Participle, like those of the Infinitive (632), have no independent time of their own, but a time which depends on the verb they modify :

sōl oriēns diem cōnficit, the sun (by) rising brings on the day.

Platō scrībēns mortuus est, Plato died (while) writing.

Homērus fuit ante Rōmam conditam, Homer lived before Rome (was) founded.

- 647 The Perfect Participles of Deponents and Semi-Deponents often have the force of Present Participles :

iisdem ducibus ūsus, using the same guides.

- 648 The Participle, acting as a Verb, governs other words in the same manner as a Finite Verb :

amāns glōriam, loving glory.

miseris succurrēns, relieving the wretched.

- 649 The Participle, acting as an Adjective, is Attributive and Predicate.

- 650 1. Attributive :

homo adultus, a grown man.

māter amāta, a beloved mother.

Like other Adjectives, it is also used as a Noun :

amantēs, lovers. nātus, son (literally, born).

docēns discentem, discēns docentem adjuvat, a teacher helps a learner, and a learner a teacher.

- 651 2. Predicate ; often with the force of a subordinate clause.

Purpose :

vēnerunt legiōnem oppūgnātūrī, they came to attack the legion.

Time:

Platō scribēns mortuus est, Plato died while writing.

Cause:

moveor tālī amīcō orbātus, I am distressed because bereaved of such a friend.

Condition:

reluctante nātūrā, inritus labor est, if nature opposes, effort is useless.

Concession:

mortālis nātus spērās immortalia, though mortal-born, thou hopest for the immortal.

652 For the Participle in the Ablative Absolute see 397, 399.

THE SUPINE

653 There are two Supines, one in -um and one in -ū. They are verbal nouns.

654 The Supine in -um expresses Purpose after verbs of Motion:

spectātum veniunt, they come to see.

līgātōs mittunt rogātum auxilium, they send envoys to ask help.

655 The Supine in -ū is used as an ablative of Specification after adjectives and fās, nefās, opus:

mīrābile dictū, wonderful to say.

sī hōc fās est dictū, if it be right to say so.

VI. THE USES OF ADVERBS

656 Adverbs (240) usually modify Verbs, sometimes Adjectives or Adverbs, and rarely Nouns :

lātē vagārī , to roam widely.	bis morī , to die twice.
lātē diffūsa , wide-spread.	bis tīctus , twice dyed. minus lātē , less widely.	bis tantum , twice as far.
lātē rēx , a ruler far and wide.	bis cōsul , twice consul.

657 The Adverb preferably stands just before the word it modifies :

sī ita putārem, levius dolērem, if I thought so, I should grieve less.

haud ita māgnus, not so great.

658 This order may be altered, especially for emphasis :

quod, etsī saepe dictum est, dīcendum est tamen saepius, this, though often said, must still be said yet oftener.

Negative Adverbs

659 nōn is the general negative, both for words and sentences.

nē is always prohibitive, and is especially used in negative commands or wishes.

haud negatives single words, usually adjectives or adverbs.

quem nōn amat, nōn amat, whom she loves not, she loves not.

haec nōn māgna rēs est, this is not a great matter.

haud male, not badly.

- 660 Two negatives usually cancel each other and make an affirmative:

nōn possum nōn cōnfitērī, I must confess.

nēmō negat, nobody denies = everybody admits.

- 661 Notice also these affirmatives:

Indefinite—with nōn first:

nōn nēmō somebody

nōn nihil something

nōn numquam sometimes

Universal—with nōn second:

nēmō nōn everybody

nihil nōn everything

numquam nōn always

- 662 But when such negatives as nōn, nēmō, nihil, numquam, are followed by nē . . . quidem, nōn . . . nōn, nec . . . nec, the sentence remains negative:

nōn praetermittam nē illud quidem, not even that will I fail to mention.

nēmō umquam nec poëta nec orātor fuit, quī quemquam meliōrem quam sē putāret, never was there orator or poet, who thought any one better than himself.

- 663 neque (nec), and not, with an affirmative word is preferred to et with a negative:

nec quisquam, and nobody nec ūllus, and no (one) nec quidquam, and nothing nec umquam, and never neque autem ego sum ita dēmēns, and, moreover, I am not so silly.

APPENDIX

ORDER OF WORDS

I. GRAMMATICAL ORDER

664 In the plain or grammatical order of a Latin sentence

1. The Subject comes first and the Predicate last :

legiō | vēnit, the legion | arrived.

2. Modifiers of the Subject accompany the Subject :

decima legiō | vēnit, the tenth legion | came.

Cicerō cōsul | rem pūblicam servāvit, Cicero the consul | saved the republic.

3. Modifiers of the Predicate precede the Predicate :

Cicerō | rem pūblicam servāvit, Cicero | saved the republic.

665 Modifiers of the Predicate come in the following order :

Adverbial constructions, Indirect Object, Direct Object, Adverbs.

A complete example is :

decima legiō || per tribūnōs mīlitum | eī | grātiās | statim | ēgit, the tenth legion || at once returned thanks to him through their military tribunes.

ORDER OF SINGLE WORDS

1. Nouns

666 Genitives usually follow the words they modify :

pater patriae, father of his country.

Appositives usually follow :

Hērodotus pater historiae, Herodotus, the father of history.

When the Appositive is a place, it often precedes :

urbs Rōma, mōns Jura, flūmen Rhēnus.

2. Adjectives

667 Adjectives precede or follow.

The common adjectives more frequently precede :

bonus homo ; longa diēs.

Adjectives of number and quantity usually precede :

duo mīlia passuum, two thousand paces, two miles.
multōs annōs, (for) many years.
ūllō modō, in any way.

Cardinals usually follow : hōra tertia, the third hour.

3. Pronouns

668 Demonstratives precede, Possessives follow :

ille liber, that book liber meus, my book hōrum omnium, of all these filius suus, (his) own son

Relatives and Interrogatives stand first in their clauses :

pōns, quī erat ad Genāvam, the bridge which was near Geneva.

quid suī cōnsiliū sit, ostendit, he shows what his plan is.

4. Adverbs

669 Adverbs regularly precede:

bene est, it is well. ferē omnēs, almost all.
paulō post, a little after.

5. Prepositions

670 The Preposition precedes the noun or phrase it governs:

in Ītaliā, into Italy.

in eōrum potestātem, into their power.

in commūnem omnium salūtem, for the common safety of all.

Short Prepositions (mostly of one syllable) may be put between the noun and its modifier:

māgnā cum laude, with high praise.

quam ob rem, wherefore.

6. Conjunctions

671 Conjunctions precede the expressions to which they belong.

But -que, and, quoque, also, quidem, indeed, dēmum, at length, follow: tū quoque, you too!

autem, enim, igitur, take the second place in the sentence, or, when est or sunt are added, they often take the third place:

cīvitātī autem imperium provinciae pollicētur, to the assembly, however, he promises dominion over the province.

nihil est igitur, therefore nothing is.

ORDER OF SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

672 A subordinate clause is used like a Noun, an Adjective, or an Adverb. See 498-501. Accordingly it is placed in the order which corresponds to its construction:

quod rediit | mīrābile vidētur, that he returned seems marvelous.

Substantive Clause (549); Subject of vidētur.

Caesar | quid suī cōnsiliī sit | ostendit, Caesar shows what his plan is.

Substantive Clause ; Object of ostendit.

fundus | quī est in agrō Sabīnō | meus est, the farm, which is in the Sabine region, is mine.

Attributive Clause ; modifies fundus.

sī peccāvī | ignōsce, if I have done wrong, forgive me.

Adverbial Clause ; modifies ignōsce.

II. RHETORICAL ORDER

673 The plain or grammatical order is very often changed, especially to make some part of the sentence emphatic. This changed order is called the Rhetorical order.

Examples of Changed Order

674 Subject emphatic :

erat in Galliā ulteriōre ūna legiō, there was in farther Gaul JUST ONE LEGION.

Object emphatic :

tē ut ūlla rēs frangat, anything break YOU down!

Predicate first :

fuit Īlium, Troy IS NO MORE.

jacta est ālea, the die IS CAST.

varia sunt hominum jūdicia, VARIOUS are the judgments of men.

Appositive first :

duae urbēs potentissimae, Carthāgō atque Numantia, TWO MOST MIGHTY CITIES, Carthage and Numantia.

Genitive first :

quantō latius officiōrum patet quam jūris rēgula, how much more widely extends the rule OF DUTY than (the rule) OF LAW.

Demonstrative last: Platō ille, the great Plato.

Adjective emphatic:

aliud iter habēbant nūllum, other way they had NONE.

Adverbial phrase emphatic:

intrā moenia sunt hostēs, WITHIN THE WALLS are our foes!

Three emphatic words: Object, Adverb, Genitive:

īram bene Ennius initium dīxit īnsāniae, it was ANGER Ennius so WELL named the beginning of MADNESS, instead of the plain matter-of-fact Ennius īram initium īnsāniae bene dīxit, Ennius well named anger the beginning of madness.

675 Notice the following special ways of securing emphasis:

Anáphora or Repetition in the same order:

Scīpiō Carthāginem dēlēvit, Scīpiō Numantiam sustulit, Scīpiō cīvitatē servāvit, Scipio destroyed Carthage, Scipio razed Numantia, Scipio saved the state.

Chiásmus ("criss-cross") or Transposition:

meminī praeteritōrum, praesentia cernō, I remember the past; the present I behold.

676 For the sake of Clearness subordinate expressions are very often inserted in the clauses to which they belong:

brevissimus (in Britanniam) trājectus, the shortest crossing (into Britain).

677 The order of words in the following fixed expressions is never changed:

populus Rōmānus, cīvis Rōmānus, etc.	terrā marīque
pontifex māximus	domī militīaeque
tribūnus plēbis, tribūnus militum, etc.	meā sponte
Jūpiter optimus māximus	mihi crēde

PROSODY

- 678 Poetry differs from Prose in having a regular swing, or Rhythm (from the Greek rhythmos, beat, throb).
- 679 In Latin this swing or rhythm comes from the regular recurring of long and short syllables, and not from the accent of the separate words as in English.

Thus in the English lines

Márching alóng, fórtý score strong, Géntlemen all, and sínging this song,

the word-accent settles the rhythm.

- 680 But in Latin poetry the word-accent is disregarded, and the quantity of the syllables, as long or short, settles the rhythm.

Thus in the Latin hexameter ("six-foot") line,

the separate word-accents are as follows (38-40):

partúriunt móntēs, nāscētur rīdiculus mūs,

But the line is not to be read by word-accent. It is to be read by the verse-accent of the six feet which compose it. In this line the verse-accent goes with the first long syllable of each foot, as follows:

[Notice that final syllables are made long by position before two consonants, even when the latter consonant is in the following word.]

English verse is thus said to be Accentual and Latin verse Quantitative.

- 681 The Quantity of Syllables and their combination in Verse of different Metres are the two parts of Prosody.

I. QUANTITY OF SYLLABLES

- 682 The general rules for the quantity of syllables, including words of one syllable, have been given. See 32-37.

Natural Quantity of Final Syllables

I. ENDING IN A VOWEL

- 683 Final a, e, y, are short ; final i, o, u, are long :
portā, amātē, misŷ ; bonī, bonō, cornū.

EXCEPTIONS

- 684 Final ā : Ablative Singular First Declension : portā.
Imperative First Conjugation : amā.
Indeclinable words as intereā, trīgintā, contrā.
But itā, quiā.
- 685 Final ē : Ablative Singular Fifth Declension : diē.
Imperative Second Conjugation : monē.
But sometimes cavē, valē, vidē.
Adverbs from Adjectives of Second Declension : rēctē. But benē, malē.
- 686 Final ī : nīsī, quasī.
Final ī : mihī, tibī, sibī, ibī, ubī.
Notice the quantity of i in the compounds ibīdem, ibīque, ubīque, ubīnam, ubīvīs, ubīcumque, utīnam, sīcutī.
- 687 Final ō : duō, citō, egō, modō and its compounds (dummodō).
Rarely in Verbs and Third Declension Nouns : amō, virgō.

II. ENDING IN A CONSONANT

688 Final Syllables ending in any consonant or consonants, except s, are short :

amāt, amānt, amābīt, amantūr, amēm.

EXCEPTIONS

689 The adverbs illīc, illūc, istīc, istūc.

Compounds of pār : dispār, impār.

īīt, petiīt, and compounds.

Final Syllables in s

690 Final as, es, os, are long ; final is, us, ys, are short :

amās, monēs, bonōs ; canīs, bonūs, chlamŷs.

EXCEPTIONS

691 Final ēs : Nominative of Third Declension Nouns with Genitive in -ētis, -ītis, -īdis : segēs (segētis), mīlēs (mīlītis), obsēs (obsīdis).

But abiēs, ariēs, pariēs.

Compounds of ēs, be : abēs, adēs, potēs.

The Preposition penēs.

692 Final ōs : compōs.

693 Final īs : Dative and Ablative Plural : puerīs, bonīs, vōbīs.

Accusative Plural : partīs, omnīs.

Some proper nouns increasing in the Genitive :

Quirīs (Quirītis), Samnīs (Samnītis).

Second Person Singular of Present Indicative Active in Fourth Conjugation : audīs.

The verbal forms īs, fīs, sīs, vīs, velīs, nōlīs, mālīs, and their compounds, as adsīs, quamvīs, possīs.

The noun vīs, force.

694 Final ūs : Fourth Declension forms, except Nominative and Vocative Singular : frūctūs.

Nominative of Third Declension Nouns with Genitive in -ūtis, -ūdis, -ūris : virtūs (virtūtis), palūs (palūdis), tellūs (tellūris).

695 Greek nouns (63, 72, 91, 92) usually keep their quantities unchanged in Latin.

Thus Aenēā, poēmā, Tempē, Dīdō, Aenēās, Pallās, Anchīsēs, Parīs, Simoīs, Dēlōs, hērōs, aēr.

II. VERSE AND METRE

696 A Verse, or line of poetry, is a series of long and short syllables arranged in a fixed order.

697 The unit of measure is the Foot, or least group of syllables arranged under one verse-accent.

A foot usually has two or three syllables, never more than four.

698 The feet most used in Latin poetry are :

Dactyl ("forefinger"), long and two short - ∪ ∪

Spondee, two long - -

Trochee, long and short - ∪

Iambus, short and long ∪ -

699 A long syllable is treated as equal to two short (- = ∪ ∪). Hence the Dactyl (- ∪ ∪), for example, is equal in Quantity to the Spondee (- -).

700 A Foot has two parts ; the Thesis, or syllable which has the rhythmical beat called the Ictus, and the Arsis, or unaccented part.

Thesis means "setting down" the foot, as in marching. Arsis means "lifting" or "raising." The Ictus is marked by a stroke, as follows:

Dactyl with Ictus on Thesis, ′ ∨ ∨
Spondee with Ictus on Thesis, ′ —

- 701 Metre means measure. The metre of any verse means the number and kind of feet which, taken in their proper order, measure the Verse. Thus Dactylic Hexameter is the metre consisting of six Dactyls (or their equivalents) arranged in a certain order:

ârmă vî|rúmquě că|nó Trō|jăē quī | prímŭs äb | órīs.

NOTE: The long and short marks used in scanning indicate the long and short syllables.

- 702 A verse lacking part of the last foot is Catalectic ("leaving off"). A complete verse is Acatalectic ("not leaving off"). The last syllable of every verse may be either long or short (≡).

Scanning

- 703 The reading of a Verse according to its Metre is called Scanning. Care must be taken to read the words unbroken, while observing the quantities, ictus and caesura. The following points should also be noticed:
- 704 The Caesúra (||) is a slight pause for reading which divides the verse. It always occurs within a Foot and at the end of a word (713, 714). The pause which occurs when the Foot and word end together is called Diaéresis (#):

ârmă vî|rúmquě că|nó || Trō|jăē quī | prímŭs äb | órīs.
(Caesura.)

itě dō|mŭm sätŭ|răē vĕnit | Hĕspĕrŭs # itě că|pĕllăē.
(Diaeresis.)

A Caesura between the thesis and arsis of the foot is called Masculine. A Caesura in the arsis of the foot is Feminine.

- 705 Elision (“crushing out”) is the slurring or obscuring of a final vowel, diphthong, or syllable ending in m before a word beginning with a vowel or h. This is regular in Latin poetry. In scanning it is desirable to give a faint sound to the elided syllable :

mōnstr[um] hōr|rēnd[um] īn|fōrm[e] īn|gēns, cūi | lūmēn ād|ēmtūm.

In Elision est, is, loses the e : dictum est = dictumst.

Elision at the end of a line is called Synaphéa (“binding”).

- 706 In some instances the two successive separate vowels are sounded without Elision. This is called Hiátus. It is usual only before or after an Interjection :

ō ēt | dē Lătī|ā, ō | ēt dē | gēntě Să|bīnā.

The following are less common :

- 707 Synizésis (“sitting together”) or Synaéresis (“taking together”) is the blending of two vowels into one long vowel :

deinde = déinde aurēis = aurēis de[h]inc = déinc cūi = cūi

- 708 Sýncōpe (“cutting out”) is the dropping of a short vowel between two consonants :

saec[u]lum = saeclum repos[i]tum = repostum

- 709 Diástōle (“drawing out”) is the lengthening of a short syllable before a caesura :

pēctōrī|būs īnhī|āns spī|rāntiā | cōnsūlit | ēxtā.

- 710 Sýstōle (“drawing together”) is the shortening of a long syllable :

ōbstīpū|i stēt|rūntquě cō|m[ae] ēt vōx | faucībūs | hāesīt.

- 711 Tmēsis (“cutting”) is cutting a compound word in two:

quō nōs cunque feret fortūna.

Dactylic Hexameter

- 712 Dactylic Hexameter, also called Heroic Verse, is composed of six dactyls, partly replaced by spondees with the ictus of a dactyl. (— ∪ ∪ = — —.)

The sixth or last foot is always a spondee and the fifth foot is generally a dactyl. The first four feet may be spondees or dactyls:

— ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | — ∪ ∪ | — —

ūt fūgī|ūnt āquī|lās || tīmī|dīssīmā | tūrbā cō|lūmbāe.
 ārmā vī|rūmqūē cā|nō || Trō|jāē quī | prīmūs āb | ōrīs.
 īll[ī] īn|tēr sē|sē || mā|gnā vī | brāchīā | tōllūnt.

A spondee may occur in the fifth foot. Such a verse is called Spondaic:

cūm sōcī|īs nā|tōquē Pē|nātībūs | ēt mā|gnīs Dīs.

- 713 The Caesura most commonly occurs in the third foot, and is Masculine (704):

ārmā vī|rūmqūē cā|nō || Trō|jāē quī | prīmūs āb | ōrīs.

Sometimes the Feminine caesura (704) is found:

īnfān|dūm rē|gīnā || jū|bēs rēnō|vārē dō|lōrēm.

- 714 The Caesura in the fourth foot is less frequent. When it occurs, there is usually another caesura in the second foot:

īndē tō|rō || pātēr | Āenē|ās || sic | ōrsūs āb | āltō.

- 715 The Diaeresis (also called the Bucolic Caesura) is sometimes found:

itē dō|mūm sātū|rāe vēnīt | Hēsperūs † itē cā|pellāe.

Dactylic Pentameter

- 716 The Dactylic Pentameter consists of two parts, each composed of two and a half feet. The spondee may replace the dactyl in the first part, but not in the second. The last syllable of the first part always ends a word :

⏏ | ⏏ | ⏏ || ⏏ | ⏏ | ⏏

- 717 Dactylic Pentameter is used only in combination with Dactylic Hexameter in the so-called Elégiac Distich, or couplet. Thus dóněc ě|rís fě|líx, || mŭl|tós nŭmě|rábĭs ä|mícōs ;

těmpōřǎ | sí fŭě|rĭnt || núbĭlǎ, | sólŭs ě|rĭs.

The following English elegiac couplet helps one to remember the two metres :

*In the Hexámeter rises the fountáin's sílvery cólumn,
In the Pentámeter áye fálling in mélody báck.*

THE ROMAN CALENDAR

- 718 The twelve months are

Jānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprĭlis, Māius, Jūnius, Jūlius, Augustus, September, Octōber, November, December.

The old names for Jūlius and Augustus were Quīntĭlis and Sextĭlis, the Fifth and Sixth months, counting from March, originally the first month of the Roman year.

The names of months are Adjectives agreeing with mēnsis, month, understood.

- 719 The first day of the month is the Calends (Kalendae), the fifth the Nones (Nōnae), and the thirteenth the Ides (Īdūs). But in March, May, July, October, the Nones and Ides came two days later. This may be remembered by the following table :

K.	1			}	MARCH MAY JULY OCTOBER
N.	5	7
I.	13	15

720 The days were counted backward from these three fixed points.

Thus January 1st is “on the January Calends,” or Kalendīs Jānuāriīs, and December 31st is “on the day before the January Calends,” or prīdiē Kalendās Jānuāriās. December 12th is “on the day before the December Ides,” or prīdiē Īdūs Decembrēs. Notice that in dates prīdiē acts as a preposition and governs the Accusative. But see 348.

721 “Two days before” is ante diem tertium, “three days before” is ante diem quārtum; and so on.

This counts one day more than we should expect. But the Romans counted in the day of the Calends, Nones, or Ides as the first day :

ante diem tertium Kalendās Jānuāriās, or a. d. III Kal. Jān. = December 30th.

ante diem quārtum Kalendās Jūniās, or a. d. IV Kal. Jūn. = May 28th.

722 ante diem (tertium, etc.) is indeclinable, and governs the Accusative.

It is sometimes used with the prepositions ab, ex, in :

ex a. d. III Kal., Jān. from December 30th.

724 The old Republican Calendar, replaced in 45 B. C. by the Julian Calendar, was based on a year of only 355 days—10 days less than the actual year. To make up this loss a short month, the mēnsis intercalāris, had been inserted every other year. The number of days in each of the regular twelve months was as follows: March, May, July, October, each 31 days; February, 28 days; the other months, each 29 days. Dates in Caesar, Cicero, and other writers before the time of the Julian Calendar, are to be read by the Republican Calendar.

725 The Roman day was the time from sunrise to sunset, the night from sunset to sunrise. An hour was the twelfth part of this day, which varied in length with the seasons. "Are there not twelve hours in the day?" was true of every Roman day, whether long or short. With sunrise at six o'clock, the approximate time of the Roman hours is as follows:

hōra prīma, the first hour = 6 to 7 A. M.

hōra secunda, the second hour = 7 to 8 A. M., and so on.

hōra ūndecima, the eleventh hour = 4 to 5 P. M.

Sometimes the divisions of the night were reckoned by hours. In such cases some word for night is usually expressed:

post prīmam hōram noctis, after the first hour of the night = after 7 P. M.

decem hōrīs nocturnīs, in ten hours of the night.

726 The night was divided into four watches of three hours each. With sunset at six o'clock, the approximate time of the Roman watches is:

vigilia prīma, 6 to 9 P. M.

vigilia secunda, 9 to midnight.

vigilia tertia, midnight to 3 A. M.

vigilia quārta, 3 to 6 A. M.

ROMAN NAMES

727 A Roman usually had three names :

1. praenōmen, personal or "given" name, as Gāius.
2. nōmen, name of gēns or clan, as Jūlius.
3. cōgnōmen, name of familia or family, as Caesar.

The nōmen nearly always ends in -ius. Every praenōmen may be abbreviated.

THE ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN

I. LATIN WORDS USED AS ENGLISH

- 729 The multitude of English words derived from Latin includes some which have been taken over without change of form, though often with change of meaning. Such, for example, are circus, omnibus, item, tandem, extra. They have become English words with English sounds. Such also are all personal, geographical, and official Latin names which occur in our language in their original form, as Julius Caesar, Cicero, Juno, Minerva; Sarmatia, Scythia, Verona; dictator, consul, censor, praetor.

These are freely used, especially in poetry. Thus Milton writes :

“From Gallia, Gades, and the British west.”

“Canst thou not remember

Quintius, Fabricius, Curius, Regulus?”

- 730 Latin words, short phrases, learned terms, and maxims in familiar use are almost naturalized as part of our language, and are therefore properly pronounced as English. Examples are seriatim, excelsior, in memoriam, vice versa, ex officio, bona fide, habeas corpus, e pluribus unum, nil desperandum.

II. THE ENGLISH METHOD

- 731 According to the English method, now no longer in general use, all Latin words are sounded as English. Thus pater is sounded páy-ter, mihi is mý-high, otium is óh-she-um, grave is grávy. It is difficult to state this method in simple form, because of the inconsistencies which are to be found even in the best English usage. The following rules, however, embody the essentials :

I. VOWELS

- 732 An accented syllable ending in a vowel always preserves the long English sound of the vowel.

The vowels in the accented syllables are sounded as follows :

má-re	dé-us	ví-ta	tó-tus	mú-sa	Tý-rus
Má-ry	dé-ist	ví-tal	tó-tal	mú-sic	tý-rant

- 733 An unaccented syllable ending in a vowel has a less distinct and shorter sound :

á-re-a	má-re	dú-bi-us	só-lo	ú-su
área	Máry	dúbious	sólo	yóu sue

But final i, except in tibi, sibi, keeps the long sound. Thus tóti = tów tie.

- 734 A syllable ending in a consonant preserves the short English sound of the vowel. The short vowels in such syllables are sounded as follows :

hanc	tes-tis	fin-do	hoc	tus-sis	cygnus
hank	tes-ty	win-dow	hock	tus-sle	sig-nal

- 735 The following exceptions occur :

a, before one r, as in art : parte = party.

qua, before dr, rt, as in quadrant, quarter.

Final es as in ease : rupes = rápees.

Final os as in dose : tardos = tár dose.

er, ir, yr, ending a word or syllable, as in her, fir, myrrh.

Thus fer, fer-vens, vir, vir-tus, myr-tus.

736

II. DIPHTHONGS

ae and oe = ee : taeter = teeter, foedus = feed us.

au = aw : laus = laws.

eu = ew : heu = hew.

ei = i : hei = high.

ui = ui : quin as in quince.

But cui and huic may be sounded ki and hike.

737 When the combinations ai, ei, oi, yi, are accented and also followed by a vowel, the i is joined in sound to the following vowel :

Mai-a = Máy-ya

Pompeí-us = Pompé-yus

Troí-a = Tró-ya

Harpyí-a = Harpý-ya

738 u before a vowel is often sounded as w.

This is always the case after q, and sometimes after g or s :

suadeo = swáy-deo

qui = kwy

queror = kweé-ror

quod = kwöd

III. CONSONANTS

739 Notice especially the following :

c before e, i, y, is like s : Cicero = Sísero.

ch is always like k : charta = kár-tah.

ci, when unaccented and before a vowel = sh(e) : socius = só-she-us.

g before e, i, y, is like j : eget = éé-jet, egit = éé-jit.

s is usually sharp, as in this : dandos = dándose.

si, when unaccented and before a vowel = sh, or sometimes zh.

Thus : confessio, as in confession (sh).

confusio, as in confusion (zh).

ti, when unaccented and before a vowel = sh : ratio = ratio.

x beginning a word = z : Xer-xes = Zúr-xees.

FIGURES OF SPEECH

740 Figures are variations from the plain form of statement.

Ellipsis (leaving out) is the omission of one or more words:

nē quid nimis, (do nothing in excess).

Pléonasm (excess) is the use of more words than are needed:

diem dīcunt, quō diē convenient, they set a day on which (day) to assemble.

Zeúgma (yoking) is the joining of two or more words in dependence on a word which strictly governs only one of them.

pācem an bellum gerēns, (making peace or waging war).

Hendíadys (one by two) is the statement of one idea by means of two words joined by a conjunction:

vī et armīs, by force of arms.

Prolépsis (taking before) is the introduction of a noun or participle before the construction which explains it:

rem vidēs, quōmodo sē habeat, you see how the matter stands.

Hypállagē (interchange) is exchange of construction in words without changing the sense:

fulva leōnis ira, the lion's tawny rage = the tawny lion's rage.

Hýsteron Próteron (last first) is reversal of the natural order of two expressions:

moriāmur et in media arma ruāmus, let us rush into the midst of battle and die.

Hypérbaton (stepping over) is transposition :

$\begin{array}{c} \text{per tē deōs ōrō, by the gods, I pray you.} \\ \text{-----} \\ \text{per tē deōs ōrō, by the gods, I pray you.} \end{array}$

“ With a violent hyperbaton to transpose the text.”—MILTON.

Oxymóron (sharp nonsense) is seeming contradiction :

absentēs adsunt, (though) absent, they are here.

Synédochē (give and take) is the use of part for whole, whole for part, material for thing made, and so on :

Thus : tectum for domus mīles for mīlitēs elephantus for ebur ferrum for gladius

Hypérbolē (overshooting) is exaggeration :

nive candidior, whiter than snow.

Lítōtēs (lessening) is understatement. It is common with negatives :

haud malus, not bad = good.

A Símile (likeness) is a direct statement that one thing is like another :

ōs deō similis, (he was) like a god in countenance.

A Métaphor (transfer) is a compressed Simile :

Fabius scūtum Rōmānōrum fuit, Mārcellus gladius, Fabius was the shield of Rome, Marcellus her sword.

Metónomy (change of name) is the use of a word to represent another of like meaning :

Mārs = bellum, argentum = pecūnia, Volcānus = īgnis.

TWENTIETH CENTURY TEXT-BOOKS.

The closing years of the nineteenth century witnessed a remarkable awakening of interest in American educational problems. There has been elaborate discussion in every part of our land on the co-ordination of studies, the balancing of contending elements in school programmes, the professional training of teachers, the proper age of pupils at different stages of study, the elimination of pedantic and lifeless methods of teaching, the improvement of text-books, uniformity of college-entrance requirements, and other questions of like character.

In order to meet the new demands of the country along these higher planes of educational work, the Twentieth Century Text-Books have been prepared.

At every step in the planning of the series care has been taken to secure the best educational advice, in order that the books may really meet the increasing demand from academies, high schools, and colleges for text-books that shall be pedagogically suitable for teachers and pupils, sound in modern scholarship, and adequate for college preparation.

The editors and the respective authors have been chosen with reference to their qualifications for the special work assigned to them. These qualifications are: First, that the author should have a thorough knowledge of his subject in its latest developments, especially in the light of recent educational discussions; second, that he should be able to determine the relative importance of the subjects to be treated in a text-book; third, that he should know how to present properly his topics to the ordinary student.

The general editorial supervision of the series is in the hands of Dr. A. F. Nightingale, Superintendent of High Schools, Chicago, with whom is associated an advisory committee composed of an expert in each department of study.

The offer of a complete series of text-books for these higher grades of schools, issued under auspices so favorable, is an event worthy of the twentieth century, and a good omen for the educational welfare of the future.

One hundred volumes are comprised in the series. A list of those now ready, and of others in preparation, will be sent upon request.

- A HISTORY OF BOHEMIAN LITERATURE.

By FRANCIS, COUNT LÜTZOW,

Author of "Bohemia : An Historical Sketch."

"This book deals with an interesting subject in an able and impartial manner, and it is written in excellent English."
—London Morning Post.

"Count Lützow's wide and deep knowledge and experience in matters Bohemian have particularly fitted him for the preparation of this work, and he has succeeded in producing a highly interesting as well as instructive exposition of a subject altogether unknown in western Europe, and hardly more familiar in America."—Boston Beacon.

"Students of literature will value this work, because it offers some insight into the character, the extent, and the quality of Bohemian literature extant, and the general public will find most interest in the discussion of the life and death of Hus and the principal events of his career, the life and work of Komensky, the sketch of Dobrovsky, and the long account of the enthusiastic work of the four patriots to whom the revival of Bohemian literature in the present century is due—Jungmann, Kollar, Safarik, and Palacky."—Boston Herald.

"Count Lützow's volume is of special value and interest."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

12mo. Cloth, $1.50 each.

ITALIAN LITERATURE.

By RICHARD GARNETT, C. B., LL. D.,

Formerly Keeper of Printed Books in the British Museum.

“Finished and graceful, at once delicate and strong, and never relapses into prosiness.”—The Dial.

“Dr. Garnett is lucid in arrangement, agreeable and correct, and often powerful and felicitous in style. He has done a real service to both English and Italian literatures.”
—Literature.

“The manual is a worthy companion of its predecessors, and will be found useful by each one who desires to refresh or enlarge his acquaintance with the magnificent achievements of Italian genius.”—Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

“A most interesting book, written from a full knowledge of the subject, but without pedantry. The style is simple, graceful, and readable; the erudition is easily discovered by those who seek for it, but it is not ostentatiously displayed. Scholars will appreciate it at its worth; the general reader will be grateful for the charity of the text, and for the labor that has made his path one of pleasure only.”—Saturday Evening Gazette.

SPANISH LITERATURE.

By JAMES FITZMAURICE-KELLY,

Member of the Spanish Academy.

“Mr. Kelly has written a book that must be read and pondered, for within its limits it has no rival as ‘A History of Spanish Literature.’”—The Mail and Express.

“The work before us is one which no student can henceforth neglect, . . . if the student would keep his knowledge of Spanish up to date. . . . We close with a renewed expression of admiration for this excellent manual; the style is marked and full of piquancy, the phrases dwell in the memory.”—The Spectator.

“A handbook that has long been needed for the use of the general reader, and it admirably supplies the want. Great skill is shown in the selection of the important facts; the criticisms, though necessarily brief, are authoritative and to the point, and the history is gracefully told in sound literary style.”—Saturday Evening Gazette.

“For the first time a survey of Spanish literature is presented to English readers by a writer of ample knowledge and keen discrimination. Mr. Kelly’s work rises far beyond the level of the text-books. So good a critic does not merely comment on literature; he makes it himself.”—New York Bookman.

JAPANESE LITERATURE

BY W. G. ASTON, C. M. G., M. A., late Acting Secretary at the British Legation at Tokio.

“A volume of unique erudition, wide research, clear discrimination, and excellent design. Mr. Aston has wrought a memorable service not only to those interested in Japan and Japanese studies, but to the world of letters at large.”

Sir Edwin Arnold, in Literature.

“Mr. Aston has written the first complete narrative from early times to the present of the history, the rituals, the poetry, the drama, and the personal outpourings of thoughts and feelings which constitute the body of the literature of Japan.”

Baltimore Sun.

“Mr. Aston has unquestionably enabled the European reader for the first time to enjoy a comprehensive survey of the vast and ancient field of Japanese literature, of which we have had hitherto only furtive and partial glimpses.”

London Times.

“His work is a model of what a manual of this character should be. While it constitutes an admirable guide-book to any one who cares to go deeper into this special subject, it is sufficiently comprehensive to meet the requirements of the average reader or the general student of literature.”

Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

THE GREAT PEOPLES SERIES

Edited by DR. YORK POWELL,

Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford.

Each 12mo. Cloth, $1.50 net; postage, 14 cents additional.

The aim of this series is to give in well-printed, clearly written, and readable volumes a view of the process by which the leading peoples of the world have become great and earned their title to greatness, to describe the share each has contributed to the common stock of civilization. It is not so much a set of political or military or even social histories, as a sequence of readable studies on the tendencies and potencies of the chief peoples of the world, that this series will strive to present.

NOW READY:

THE SPANISH PEOPLE.

By Dr. MARTIN A. S. HUME.

"The reader quickly perceives that the riches promised by Dr. Powell are amply found, at least in this first volume. The history is written with a new object and from a new standpoint; there is not a dull page in it. Mr. Hume writes with all the advantages of the modern historical specialist, and his picture of the development of the Spaniard is an important history of a people whose picturesque career is one of unflinching interest."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

THE FRENCH PEOPLE.

By ARTHUR HASSALL, M. A., Student of Christ Church, Oxford; Author of "The Balance of Power," etc.

In accordance with the general plan of the series, this important work presents the evolution of a people. The method is modern, and although the sources, development, and transitions of a great race are fully indicated in a comparatively small compass, the author's aims and results differ widely from the set record of political, dynastic, and military facts which are chronicled in the dry language of the usual hand-book. The part that France has played in the world's history has been frequently so picturesque and dramatic, as well as great, that a vital analysis of her history like this possesses a profound interest. The author is one of the ablest of the rising English historians and a lecturer at Christ Church, Oxford.

TWENTIETH CENTURY TEXT BOOKS.

A History of the American Nation.

By ANDREW C. McLAUGHLIN, Professor of American History in the University of Michigan. With many Maps and Illustrations. 12mo. Cloth, $1.40.

“One of the most attractive and complete one-volume histories of America that has yet appeared.”—Boston Beacon.

“Complete enough to find a place in the library as well as in the school.”—Denver Republican.

“This excellent work, although intended for school use, is equally good for general use at home.”—Boston Transcript.

“It should find a place in all historic libraries.”—Toledo Blade.

“Clearness is not sacrificed to brevity, and an adequate knowledge of political causes and effects may be gained from this concise history.”—New York Christian Advocate.

“A remarkably good beginning for the new Twentieth Century Series of text-books. . . . The illustrative feature, and especially the maps, have received the most careful attention, and a minute examination shows them to be accurate, truthful, and illustrative.”—Philadelphia Press.

“The work is up to date, and in accord with the best modern methods. It lays a foundation upon which a superstructure of historical study of any extent may be safely built.”—Pittsburg Times.

“A book of rare excellence and practical usefulness.”—Salt Lake Tribune.

“The volume is eminently worthy of a place in a series destined for the readers of the coming century. It is highly creditable to the author.”—Chicago Evening Post.

Chinese Literature.

By HERBERT A. GILES, M. A., LL. D. (Aberd.), Professor of Chinese in the University of Cambridge.

“Few recent histories of literature are more pregnant with new and interesting material than this. There is nothing like it in any library, and one may say with assurance that there is not a dull page in it.”—Boston Transcript.

“Information and instruction share its pages with enlivening wit and wisdom, and it can be confidently relied upon for many hours of pure delight.”—Chicago Evening Post.

“Any private, public, or school library that fails to place it on its shelves would be guilty of almost culpable indifference to the most opportune, the most instructive, the most fascinating of Asiatic masterpieces that has ever been garnered into a single volume.”—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

“The work is done with sympathy, with insight, and with that openness of mind which is so essential in dealing with the life and thought of the East. The quality of the poetry will surprise those who have thought of the Chinese as dealing in prudential maxims and in philosophy of the moral life rather than in the stuff of the imagination.”—The Outlook.

D. APPLETON AND COMPANY, NEW YORK.

By Prof. G. MASPERO.

The greatest and most scholarly work on the history of the Ancient World.

The Passing of the Empires

(Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Persia, and Medea), 850 B. C. to 330 B. C.

By Prof. G. MASPERO, author of "The Dawn of Civilization" and "The Struggle of the Nations." Edited by the Rev. Prof. A. H. Sayce. Translated by M. I. McClure. With Maps and numerous Illustrations, including three Colored Plates. Uniform edition. 4to. Cloth, $7.50.

"With this magnificent volume Professor Maspero completes his great task, which has extended over nearly seven years, of writing a history of the Oriental world from the earliest times down to the death of Darius. The work has been great, as the progress of Oriental research has been so rapid, and discoveries so numerous, that to attain any finality seemed impossible; but the author has neglected nothing, and indeed the footnotes to these volumes show an almost herculean labor of research among authorities in every land and every tongue, and add immensely to the value of the work."—Chronicle (London).

"For learning and industry, Professor Maspero's epoch-making series on the 'History of the Ancient Peoples of the Classic East' deserves to be called monumental. . . . The work is a remarkably full encyclopædia of the subject of which it treats, though arranged in chronological and not in alphabetical order. Owing to these characteristics it is indispensable as a book of reference. . . . 'The Passing of the Empires,' whatever be its imperfections or blemishes, is the completion of a prodigious achievement, and its usefulness will be in proportion to the labor it has cost."—Sunday-School Times.

A WORK OF GREAT VALUE.

The International Geography.

By Seventy Authors, including Right Hon. JAMES BRYCE, Sir W. M. CONWAY, Prof. W. M. DAVIS, Prof. ANGELO HEILPRIN, Prof. FRIDTJOF NANSEN, Dr. J. SCOTT KELTIE, and F. C. SELOUS. With 488 Illustrations. Edited by HUGH ROBERT MILL, D. Sc. 8vo. 1088 pages. Cloth, $3.50.

“Can unhesitatingly be given the first place among publications of its kind in the English language. . . . An inspection of the list of associate authors leads readily to the conclusion that no single volume in recent scientific literature embodies, in original contributions, the labor of so many eminent specialists as this one. . . . The book should find a place in every library, public or private, that contains an atlas or gazetteer.”—The Nation.

“The attempt to present in one volume an authoritative modern summary of the whole of geography as fully as space would permit has been admirably successful.”—New York Sun.

“In brief, it may be said to be both a reference book and a connected geographical history of the modern world, something that any one can read with profit in addition to finding it of constant value in his library.”—Chicago Evening Post.

“In his entirely studious moments the geographer cherishes above all things facts and accuracy. He must, therefore, value very highly a work like the ‘International Geography.’ It should be precious alike to the specialist and to the beginner. . . . Small but adequate maps are constantly introduced, and there is, finally, a splendid index.”—New York Tribune.

“Simply invaluable to students, teachers, and others in need of such a book of reference.”—Washington Times.

“Not only as complete as the limits would allow, but is strictly up to date.”—San Francisco Argonaut.

EDITED BY EDMUND GOSSE,

Hon. M. A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

ANCIENT GREEK LITERATURE. By GILBERT MURRAY, M. A., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50.

"A sketch to which the much-abused word 'brilliant' may be justly applied. Mr. Murray has produced a book which fairly represents the best conclusions of modern scholarship with regard to the Greeks."—London Times.

"An illuminating history of Greek literature, in which learning is enlivened and supplemented by literary skill, by a true sense of the 'humanities.' The reader feels that this is no book of perfunctory erudition, but a labor of love, performed by a scholar, to whom ancient Greece and her literature are exceedingly real and vivid. His judgments and suggestions are full of a personal fresh sincerity; he can discern the living men beneath their works, and give us his genuine impression of them."—London Daily Chronicle.

"A fresh and stimulating and delightful book, and should be put into the hands of all young scholars. It will make them understand, or help to make them understand, to a degree they have never yet understood, that the Greek writers over whom they have toiled at school are living literature after all."—Westminster Gazette.

"Brilliant and stimulating."—London Athenæum.

"A powerful and original study."—The Nation.

"Mr. Murray's style is lucid and spirited, and, besides the fund of information, he imparts to his subject such fresh and vivid interest that students will find in these pages a new impulse for more profound and exhaustive study of this greatest and most important of all the world's literatures."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"The admirable perspective of the whole work is what one most admires. The reader unlearned in Greek history and literature sees at once the relation which a given author bore to his race and his age, and the current trend of thought, as well as what we value him for to-day. . . . As an introduction to the study of some considerable portion of Greek literature in English translations it will be found of the very highest usefulness."—Boston Herald.

"Professor Murray has written an admirable book, clear in its arrangement, compact in its statements, and is one, we think, its least scholarly reader must feel an instructive and thoroughly trustworthy piece of English criticism."—New York Mail and Express.

"At once scholarly and interesting. . . . Professor Murray makes the reader acquainted not merely with literary history and criticism, but with individual living, striving Greeks. . . . He has felt the power of the best there was in Greek life and literature, and he rouses the reader's enthusiasm by his own honest admiration."—Boston Transcript.

"Professor Murray has contributed a volume which shows profound scholarship, together with a keen literary appreciation. It is a book for scholars as well as for the general reader. The author is saturated with his subject, and has a rare imaginative sympathy with ancient Greece."—The Interior, Chicago.

"Written in a style that is sometimes spasmodic, often brilliant, and always fresh and suggestive."—New York Sun.

"Professor Murray's careful study will be appreciated as the work of a man of unusual special learning, combined with much delicacy of literary insight."—New York Christian Advocate.
